Japan Demands Bases In Indo-China; R. A. F. Blasts Blitz Troops

Tokyo Negotiations With Petain Regime Begin; New Trade Pact Also Sought

By the United Press

Vichy, Aug. 4.—Japan has demanded the right to establish naval and military bases in French Indo-China and diplomatic negotiations on the question are proceeding in Tokyo between Ambassador Charles Arsene-Henry and the Japanese Foreign Office, French informants said tonight.

The Japanese also demand a new trade agreement providing for greatly increased Japanese exports to Indo-China which would be paid for by Japanese imports of iron, coal, tin and other Indo-Chinese raw materials, according to the informants.

Held Necessary for Victory

The demand for military bases, the informants said, was explained as necessary to enable the Japanese to obtain an early victory over Chinese nationalist armies headed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

The informant said Vichy was without detailed information as to the progress of the negotiations and gave no hint as to whether or not this government would approve the Japanese demands. It was pointed out, however, that the new governor-general of Indo-China, Admiral Jean Decoux, has wide powers, owing to limited communications between Hanoi and the home government.

[The Japanese Foreign Office denied the Vichy report of negotiations, and an army spokesman in Tokyo denied knowledge of the reported demands. The Foreign Office asserted the reports were spread for "ulterior purposes."]

Traffic to China Cut 80 Per Cent

Shanghai, Aug. 4.—Japan has already obtained de facto control over French Indo-China and is daily extending and tightening her grip upon this vast, rich colonial empire.

Even the French-leased territory of Kwang-Chowan is now under Japanese domination, it having been officially announced at Hanoi that Japanese inspectors were at present in control of Kwang-Chowan harbor, and have already reduced by 80 per cent, traffic into the Chinese territory.

The announcement adds that only two companies of French infantry were at Kwang-Chowan, wherefore Japanese seizure of authority was easy.

At Hanoi and Haiphong there are large groups of Japanese army, navy and aviation experts, as well as a commission representing Tokyo's Asia development board

London, Aug. 4.—Karl Ulmanis, Nebraska-educated former president and premier of Latvia, is dead of injuries suffered in an assault, Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, reported tonight.

The 62-year-old Ulmanis was reported to have been wounded July 22 and to have been taken to a Riga hospital.

Ulmanis, who was graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1909 and who helped write the Latvian Declaration of Independence in 1918, was ousted from his position as virtual dictator of the little Baltic nation on July 20, when the country's new Communist leaders petitioned for admission into the Soviet Union.

Release of Two Arrested in London Again Demanded

Copyright by New York Times

London, Aug. 4.—Anglo-Japanese relations have taken a more serious turn over the week-end.

For the second time in two days, Japanese Ambassador Shigemitsu called upon Foreign Secretary Halifax to demand the release of two prominent Japanese held here and to seek further information about the arrest of four more of his countrymen at Rangoon and Singapore in the last 24 hours.

A spokesman at the Japanese Embassy here said that, judging from the cables fromTokyo andthe tone of his country's press, "strong action against Britain is unavoidable," despite insistence by the British Foreign Office that the arrests of Japanese by British authorities are not reprisals for the round-up of Britons in Japan on suspicion of espionage.

Japan's Resentment

London newspapers played up Japanese resentment against what it was said was "erroneously" interpreted as retaliatory action and it apparently is touch and go whether recent events will align Japan with Germany and Italy against Britain, although best informed circles believe the Japanese are not eager for a showdown now.

The Japanese Embassy, it was learned tonight, received a cablegram from Tokyo saying that the Halifax explanation of the arrests of Satoru Makihara, London manager of Mitsubishi Shoji, and Sunsuke Tanabe, acting manager here for Mitsu Bushan Kaisha, was "unsatisfactory."

It was after receipts of this cable that Shigemitsu sought out Viscount Halifax to demand the release of the two prisoners held in Brixton Jail. But before his second interview with Halifax, Shigemitsu received word that four more Japanese nationals had been arrested by the British, three in Rangoon and one in Singapore.

Names Withheld

The names of those taken into custody at Rangoon were not disclosed here, but it was said that they were all businessmen. The man held in Singapore was said to be Ishiro Kobayashi, correspondent of the Japanese news agencies.

Armored Train, Barges Bombed As British Push Air Offensive

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 4. — Britain plunged her air force into the offensive tonight as hard-hitting raiders brought back word of Nazi troop and equipment concentrations just across the English Channel.

On the eve of the August high tides, which from tomorrow through Friday will afford the Germans their best chance of sea-borne attack, British pilots told of machine-gunning troops at Abbeville and bombing lorry convoys, an armored train and barges near Gravelines and Dunkerque.

An air ministry communique, terming German defense weaker and less accurate, told of attacks from Saturday through last night ranging from the Nazi-held coast to industrial centers deep in Germany.

The announcement said naval buildings at Kiel were set afire, airdromes were pounded heavily, and synthetic oil plants with which Adolf Hitler helps feed his war machine were hit directly.

3 Bombers Missing

Three British bombers failed to return from widespread raids.

Authoritative sources said the emphasis would be kept on offensive in the air, taking advantage of the steadily lengthening hours of darkness for harder blows than ever at Germany.

(Berlin reports told of intensified British bombings in a wide area of north Germany, and described Nazi air blows aimed principally at England's antiaircraft defenses and shipping bases.

(The Germans said antiaircraft positions near Swansea, on the Bristol Channel in Wales, and on Canday Island were bombed and other raiders started large fires along the oil harbor of Stanlow, near Liverpool.)

Disclosure that the Royal Air Force has accelerated preparations for farther ranging raids by bigger bombing squadrons, taking advantage of the longer nights, came as England's own defends stood alert for invasion that might be timed with five days of high tides, starting tomorrow.

Those tides, which the almanac predicts will be accompanied from tomorrow through Friday with calm sea and English Channel fog, would offer the most favorable weather conditions this month for a seaborne blitz blow by Adolf Hitler.

May Strike Thursday

[A United Press Stockholm dispatch quoted private Norwegian advices as saying the German high command now plans its invasion of Britain in the general period around August 8 to 10. These advices said German forces in Norway had been undergoing intensive training for several weeks.]

The Admiralty announced the sinking of the armed trawler Cape Finistere Friday in a fight with four enemy planes, one of which was shot down. Meanwhile two other trawlers returned to port with an account of bagging an attacking bomber which came within their machinegun range.

Authoritative British sources said that although the nation is aware that Hitler would have the weather as an ally in any direct attack across the English Channel during the next five days, Britain's real warefforf

D. C. Vote Has Backing Of Sabath

Chairman of House Rules Committee Declares Sympathy For Sumners Bill

National representation for Washington last night was guaranteed a sympathetic hearing from at least the chairman of the House Rules Committee, which now holds the fate of a resolution to amend the Constitution to enfranchise the District.

Representative Adolph J. Sabath, committee chairman who has served more consecutive terms in the House than any man in United States history, told the Post he believe dthe Capital was entitled to elect repreScntatives in Conress and to vote for Presidential electors.

"A Funny Committee"

Informed that Representative Hatton W. Sumners, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has announced he will request Sabath "early this week" to grant a hearing for a suffrage resolution, favorably reported by Sumners' committe Thursday, Sabath declared:

"I have a funny committee and while I cannot guarantee what it will do, it has always been my policy that the members have a right to vote on any bill brought out by one of the committees of Congress."

Sumners sadi his schedule for the week would not permit him to confer with the Rules Committee chairman before tomorrow. Sabath pointed out, however, that his committee would be in session today, but probably would not meet again before Wednesday.

Observes City's Growth

Sabath, observing that in his 34 years in the House he has been Washington grow from a city of 180,000 to nearly 700,000, said he did not believe national representation was "asking too much."

Meanwhile, Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, revealed he was seeking immediate consideration by his group of a bill to give Washington the right to elect its governing officers. Randolph said he was polling members of his committee to see if sentiment justified its discussion of the problem.

Randolph also said he was willing to sponsor an amendment to the Sumners resolution restoring a provision for District representation in the Senate when the legislation reaches the floor of the House. He explained that any move he might make in this direction would depend on the wishes of Sumner, to whom he offered "energetic and active support."

Unless a majority of his committee favors consideration, Randolph explained, it would be "useless" for him to propose discussion of local suffrage.

Woman Toying With Gun Is Shot; Condition Critical

Shot near the heart, Mrs. Julia Passman, 20, a wife of ten months, was in a critical condition at Sibley Hospital last night.

The young woman was taken to the hospital by her husband, Emil, 22, who told police she accidentally shot herself while toying with a .32-caliber revolver in their apartment at 739 Quebec street northwest.

Just before lapsing into unconsciousness at the hospital, Mrs. Passman told a nurse, "I shot myself."

Passman, who is a service man for the Hoover Co., said he borrowed the gun from relatives two weeks ago, when his landlord, who was going away for a while, left the Passmans in charge of the house.

Gasoline Tax Rise Opposed in D. C.

The Federation of Citizens Associations has declared itself "vigorously and overwhelmingly" opposed to any legislation proposing to increase the gasoline tax here.

Harry S. Wender, chairman, committee on law, yesterday stated the federation's attitude in a letter to Representative William R. Poage. He requested that federation representatives be heard at a hearing on the issue tomorrow.

Reporter's Bride Helps Capture Escaped Patients

She was wed to a newspaper reporter only a week ago, but Mrs. Sallie Davis had developed a nose for news last night, and it came in handy.

It resulted in the recapture of three of four mental patients who escaped yesterday afternoon from Walter Reed Hospital.

Before leaving home for work her husband, Robert Davis, local police reporter, called police headquarters to ask whether anything was going on. He was told that three men in red hospital garb had escaped and passed the word along to Mrs. Davis, jestingly warning her to be careful.

Davis went to work and Mrs. Davis went to visit her grandmother, Mrs. Robert Retzer, 5011 Fourteenth street northwest, where she joined a group on the front porch. Before long three men in red suits came along and stopped in front of the house.

"What peculiar clothes they are wearing," somebody said. Mrs. Davis took one look, gave the alarm and dashed to the telephone to call her husband at police headquarters. The porch was evacuated in short order.

Davis informed the police dispatcher, who sent out a squad car. James R. Elkins, Chalmus Locklear and Anthony Francese were apprehended.

The fourth escaped man, described as Emelio Bottino, 28, slim, 135 pounds, 5 feet 10 inches, ruddy complexion, black hair and a twitch in one side of the face, remained at large.

FBI Handles Spy Complaints At Rate of 2,900 a Day

Complaints of spies and other subversive agents have deluged the Federal Bureau of Investigation at a rate of nearly 2,900 a day since the war began last September, J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, revealed last night.

The disclosure was made in a summary of FBI activities for the fiscal year ended June 30 which was timed for publication as officials of the States gathered in Washington to confer on uniform measures for enlisting State help in defense problems of the Federal Government.

President Roosevelt, who made the FBI the national clearing house for espionage information, will send the conference a message at its opening session in the Department of Justice at 10 a. m. today.

Closer cooperation between Federal and State officers in rounding up spies and saboteurs will be a main aim of the gathering

Fourteen Governors, in addition to attorneys general and other State officers, will be on hand to participate in two days' discussion of all phases of State participation in the defense program. Espionage, sabotage, sedition, alien registration and "education" to combat subversive propaganda are subjects to be discussed.

While the conference will be marked principally by interchange of information among State and the Federal Government, its leaders last night predicted that one result might well be the enactment of State legislation to give States a larger share in the defense program.

Pershing Urges U. S. to Send 50 Destroyers to England As Leaders Plead for Draft

Knox Calls Training Essential at Once As Congress Prepares For Big Defense Week

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Congress last night moved toward a week of momentous action on conscription and other war-spawned issues, amid coast-to-coast appeals by military and civil leaders that it order compulsory military training immediately.

Deepest concern in official and private circles over the wars on both sides of America sent sweeping across the country these admonitions and pleas:

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox: "If we are to protect ourselves, our integrity and this hemisphere we can take but one action: Adopt compulsory military training and adopt it now."

Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson: "Today, America needs an army of about 1,300,000 men. . . . Voluntary enlistment places the burden upon the patriotic few. Compulsory military training extends it to all. It is the democratic way."

Deadline Here, Says Adler

Col. Julius Ochs Adler, civilian aide to Secretary of War Stimson: "A deadline for America has arrived" requiring a decision "whether we shall marshall all our manpower to protect the integrity of our country and the freedom of our constitution."

Dr. Paul T. David, acting director of the American Youth Commission: Proposals to narrow the age-range in a selective service draft are unfair to the nation's youth, and "men in circumstances which make them equally available should be chosen by lot and called throughout a wide range of ages."

At the same time, warnings to arm now or follow the road of appeasement, uttered by Senators Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, and Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, were echoed by cries of "war hysteria' from Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York. The four spoke in Theodore Granik's Forum of the Air over the Mutual System, while Secretary Knox, Patterson and Adler participated in a Columbia radio hook-up.

Problems Before House

Lindbergh Urges U. S. to Offer Europe a Plan to End Wars

Chicago, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, asserting that domestic and foreign "interests" are attempting to draw the United States into war, today urged to an antiwar rally of 50,000 persons that America offer Europe a peace plan.

"Let us," he said, "offer Europe a plan for the progress and protection of the western civilization of which they and we each form a part . . . If we refuse to consider treaties with the dominating nations of Europe, regardless of who they may be, we remove all possibility of peace."

"In the past," Lindbergh recalled, "we have dealt with a Europe dominated by England and France. In the future we may have to deal with a Europe dominated by Germany."

He added, however, that any treaties or peace plan should be backed by an impregnable national defense.

Lindbergh, who broke self-imposed silence September 15 to oppose American entrance into the European war, spoke with Senator McCarran, of Nevada, one of the leading Democratic isolationists, and Representative Van Zandt (Republican), Pennsylvania, thrice national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, in Soldier Field. The meeting was sponsored by the Citizens' Keep Out of War Committee.

LINDBERGH

"We must . . . lead in offering plans for peace."

While urging that America "rearm fully," Lindbergh asserted that no foreign nation would desire to invade the United States if it does not interfere in such nation's affairs.

He warned that we must guard continuously against forces which would draw us into war; said American opinion was now definitely and overwhelmingly against our involvement in the war; and suggested that it was time for the United States to consider its relationship

'Tomorrow May Be Too Late' to Keep War Away From Our Shores, Says General

Gen. John J. Pershing last night urged that the United States make available at least 50 destroyers to help Great Britain, asserting that "we shall be failing in our duty to America if we do not do it."

The World War commander of the American Expeditionary Forces, now in his eightieth year, said in a broadcast address that "by sending help to the British, we can still hope with confidence to keep the war on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean where the enemies of liberty, if possible, should be defeated."

Asks Quick Action

Urging immediate action, he declared:

"I say to you solemnly that tomorrow may be forever too late to keep war from the Americas. Today may be the last time when by measures short of war we can still prevent war."

"If the destroyers help save the British fleet," the General declared, "they may save us from the danger and hardship of another war. Americans should not shrink from duty because of possible hazards."

Pointing out that the United States has "an increased reserve of destroyers left over from the other war, and in a few months the British will be completing a large number of destroyers of their own," Pershing declared:

"The most critical time, therefore, is the next few weeks and months."

Text of Address

The General's complete text follows:

"I am speaking tonight because I consider it my duty. It is my duty to tell you that, in my opinion, we face problems of the utmost seriousness, that all the things we hold most dear are gravely threatened. I must tell you that we can defend them only if we make up our minds now to speak the truth without flinching; if we make up our minds to face the truth without flinching; if we make up our minds to act upon the truth without hesitating. I think you will believe me when I say that no war was ever prevented by hiding the danger and by arguing that the danger does not exist.

"The men who are best qualified to know what is going on in Europe and in Asia and in this hemisphere, the men whose business it is to know the facts, are very nearly unanimous in believing what I am saying to you tonight—that grave danger for us lurks in the present world situation.

Willkie Talks With Farm Leaders Today

Arrives in Des Moines For Conference With Chiefs of 10 States

By the United Press

Des Moines, Aug. 4.—Wendell L. Willkie arrived tonight by plane from Colorado Springs, Colo., for a conference tomorrow with Midwestern Governors and farm leaders who will help him formulate agricultural phases of his acceptance speech to be delivered at Elwood, Ind., August 17.

He was greeted at Des Moines airport by a crowd of about 2,000. He was accompanied by his wife and a party of 25, including his advisers and members of the press.

He and his wife were taken by automobile to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Cowles, jr., where they were dinner guests. Cowles is executive editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune.

Willkie will confer tomorrow morning with agricultural leaders from ten Midwestern States to gain ideas for paragraphs on farm angles for his acceptance speech.

Invitations to attend the conference have been accepted by Republican Governors, Republican candidates for Governors and farm leaders from Iowa, Nebraska, Illinois, Kansas, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Missouri, Minnesota and Indiana.

The conference was arranged by Gov. George A. Wilson of Iowa at Willkie's request. The candidate will hold a press conference after the meeting and then will greet the public from the Statehouse steps.

Jackson Gives GOP Warning On Hatch Law

Says Fletcher Plan Of Dividing Campaign Gifts Is Not Approved

Attorney General Jackson last night warned Republicans against accepting the opinion of their party's general counsel, Henry P. Fletcher, that by sub-dividing gifts, party doners may escape the $5,000 limitation in the Hatch Act.

Jackson, in a statement, called the Fletcher proposal a plan "for avoiding the limitations of the Hatch Act," and declared that "no plans of this nature" were "accepted or approved by the Department of Justice."

Fletcher announced his opinion Saturday after it had been sent to Republican national committeemen and State chairmen. He said that provisions of the Hatch Act limiting personal campaign contributions to $5,000 did not embrace contributions made to a "State or local committee or other local organization."

In view of that, Fletcher said, "we see no objection to any donor giving any amount he sees fit" to one of those groups. He added, however, that such groups should be "entirely divorced from the Republican National Committee and should operate by authorization of the respective State committees."

Jackson's statement yesterday said:

"My attention is called to the published opinion of Henry P. Fletcher, counsel of the Republican National Committee, interpreting provisions of the Hatch Act which were intended to place limitations on campaign contributions

British Flying Boat Ends First Sea Hop To N. Y. Since War

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—The camouflaged British flying boat Clare, skimmed to a landing on Flushing Bay last night after an uneventful flight from England.

The Clare, resuming experimental transatlantic flights for the British Overseas Airways interrupted by the war, was escorted across the Irish Sea by a group of Royal Air Force fighting planes.

Only one passenger, Col. William J. Donovan, war hero and lawyer, was aboard. He explained he was returning from "a mission for the Secretary of the Navy," but declined to discuss it "until I report to him."

Donovan denied the trip concerned possible sale of destroyers to England, and said he might go to Washington.

D. C. Guardsmen Reach Camp Six Hours Behind Schedule

By Marshall Andrews

Northumberland, Pa., Aug. 4.—Six hours behind schedule, weary and hungry, nearly 2,000 District National Guardsmen rolled into this Pennsylvania town tonight, squatted down to mess four hours old and tumbled into their blankets for the first full night's sleep most of them have had in a week.

The day's program was completely disrupted by a delay in Washington while the 260th Coast Artillery, commanded by Col. Walter W. Burns, sought to obtain sufficient transportation facilities for its 1,200 men, antiaircraft guns and searchlights.

The 260th was scheduled to leave Washington in four convoys at 9:35 a. m. and arrive here at 3:20 p. m. Actually, the last convoy left at 12:20 and didn't arrive until 9:30 p. m.

In the morning, Col. Burns requested 16 extra trucks for his men from District National Guard Headquarters. He was assigned but eight. With the take-off time on hand, Col. Burns learned that he had 100 men without traveling facilities. Twenty of these he crammed in other trucks, but there just wasn't any room for the others.

This time Col. Burns appealed to the assistant adjutant general's office and was informed to send the 80 along by train, but when told there were no provisions for feeding the 80, Col. Burns refused to

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

OF THEE I SING, BABY.

EXUBERANCE: At a recent stag party of Capital notables an exhilarated Congressman galloped around yelling: "I'm me! I'm me! Me! All me!"

Harlan Miller

At length a Senator squelched him with:

"Tell it to your constituents!"

* * * *

JIM'S FAULT: The real man to blame for the third-term adventure, vow some of the New Dealers, is James Aloysius Farley. They say it was Jim who turned thumbs down on a Presidential build-up for Attorney General Jackson or Henry Wallace, because Jim loved the gal himself, a candid, honest, boyish passion.

* * * *

Jackson, then ass't att'y gen'l, seemed too obscure to Jim, even for New York's governor as a way station, and had just made some frightening New Deal speeches. Farley stoutly declined to have any part of a former Republican like Wallace . . . So now they call Farley the original third-termite.

* * * *

BET ON 15: Some of Willkie's Indiana admirers are betting even money that Willkie will carry these 16 States: All New England except Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Minnesota, Michigan and New Jersey. They regard these as Willkie cinches.

"—the Roosevelt refugees"

Other observers are picking two of the New England States, Rhode Island and Connecticut, with Wyoming and New Jersey, as the weak spots in the lists, and betting FDR will carry them. The 16 States cast 179 electoral votes; Willkie would need only 87 more electoral votes to be elected.

* * * *

BET ON 30: After listening to this 16-State theory for an hour or so, over a series of beers, a fairly lukewarm New Dealer wagered $250 that Roosevelt would carry 30 States.

Even if he did, Willkie could still be elected by the electoral votes from the other 18 States, if they included the big ones.

* * * *

CHASTE LAPEL: Henry Wallace apparently dislikes to wear campaign buttons on his lapel. Someone handed him a small rectangular button with a pretty tinted likeness of Roosevelt. Henry carefully pinned it inside his coat, just opposite the pencil with a magnifying glass mounted on the eraser, which he carries in his vest pocket.

* * * *

GETS THE GREASE: A couple of Senators were bragging, in the stimulating presence of another Senator's pretty wife, that they never hung around the White House much bothering the President.

"When he wants to see me he can send for me," said one.

"—the squeaking hinge"

"Well," said the Senator's pretty wife, "that's not the way my husband does. He takes good care to remind the President at regular intervals that he's still alive."

"You know," she added as an afterthought, "it's the squeaking hinge that gets the grease."

* * * *

NO HOOSIER BOOS: Paul McNutt (who may be it in 1944) has gone out of his way to puncture the tale that McHale's gentlemen from Indiana had anything to do with the booing of Henry Wallace.

What's more, the Wallace men have been eloquent in their praise of McNutt's good sportsmanship and leadership in aiding Henry's nomination.

Which seems to dispose of the story that the boos had a Hoosier accent.

* * * *

"What's more," adds Mr. McNutt, "those boos were not aimed at Henry Wallace as an individual or as a nominee, at all. Everyone at the convention who knows his way home knows that."

Incidentally, the ovation for McNutt, the most spontaneous at the convention, was unaided by any band or organ music.

* * * *

ROOSEVELT REFUGEES: The rush of converted Democrats to the Willkie bandwagon is assuming the aspects of a flight of refugees from a bombarded zone in the chateau country.

From a low-flying swivel chair it appears that most of these Roosevelt refugees have been seriously wounded the last seven years, or at least shell-shocked.

* * * *

They differ from most refugees, of course, in the fact that they know where their next meal's coming from . . . Some Willkie men are already fearfully afraid the evacuation may make the Willkie bandwagon top-heavy and cause it to turn turtle.

Nazi Trade Held Peril in Americas

Foreign Policy Group Sees Danger Of Political Rule

By Harold B. Hinton

Copyright by New York Times

Economic penetration of Latin America by Nazi Germany will be opposed by the United States, not from fear of economic competition, but because economic domination is a recognized weapon of German foreign policy, leading to political and even military domination, according to the bulletin of the Foreign Policy Association published yesterday under the title, "Economic Defense of the Americas."

It was written by a member of the association's research staff, Howard J. Trueblood, who went to Havana to observe the consultative meeting of Pan American foreign ministers which concluded its labors last week.

"At present the chief danger to the Western Hemisphere lies in the possibility that Germany, once it has secured control over Europe, may launch an intensive trade drive in Latin America," the report said. Such a drive is feared by the United States more because of its political than its economic implications.

Could Out-Bargain U. S.

"A Nazi-dominated Europe would require vast quantities of Latin American raw materials and foodstuffs and would be in a position to produce a large supply of finished goods in exchange. It would presumably also have ample quantities of armaments for sale on terms attractive to Latin American governments which might have militaristic ambitions.

"Since the United States, under normal conditions, takes no more than a third of Latin American exports, while Europe imports more than half, Germany's bargaining position would be considerably stronger than that of this country.

"Under the circumstances, even if the Latin American countries found the political philosophy and trading methods of Germany repugnant, they could hardly reject, on moral grounds, the possibility of selling their heavy surpluses of foodstuffs and raw materials to Europe.

Each of the Latin American countries, acting alone, could not refuse to sell, even if it so desired, and no single country in that region has the economic or military power to reject Germany's terms, despite the fact that these terms may ultimately spell German political domination."

More Than Ideal Necessary

Such domination would constitute a distinct strategic threat to the United States, the report added, because, of the 14 strategic materials listed by the Army and Navy as having to be imported, Latin America is an important producer of five—antimony, manganese, mercury, quartz crystal and tungsten, and could supply in time large quantities of mica, chromium, cocoanut shell char, manila fiber, quinine and rubber.

Foreseeing an apparently inevitable economic struggle which will probably be the prelude to a military conflict, the report said:

"To keep the bonds tight, the United States must be in a position to offer more to Latin America than a victorious Germany. It is not so much a question of what Latin America would choose, but what it might be forced to do under economic pressure.

"Germany is organized to exert that pressure, as well as to provide economic aid. No haphazard, lofty ideal of Pan Americanism will be sufficient to keep the Latin American nations in the economic and strategic orbit of the United States after the war. They will remain in that orbit only if it is to their material advantage.

"The United States cannot expect financial and economic sacrifices from the Latin American countries for a political ideal."

Roosevelt May Visit Defenses in North

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 4 (INS).—President Roosevelt spent a quiet Sunday. Plans for a possible tour of nearby national defense units during the coming week remained unannounced.

Conjecture as to the points Mr. Roosevelt might visit ranged from the New London (Conn.) submarine base to the Watervliet (N. Y.) Army Arsenal, with further speculation on New York Harbor defenses and the Navy ordnance plant at Baldwin, Long Island.

Seeks Radio Equality

By International News Service

Wendell L. Willkie will demand as much free radio time as is accorded to President Roosevelt during the 1940 campaign, it was learned here last night.

Weighing statements of the President that his concern over international developments would force him to remain close to the Capital and confine his campaign pronouncements to press conferences and radio addresses, leaders of the Willkie campaign told International News Service:

"If Mr. Roosevelt plans to carry on his campaign from the White House, through fireside chats for which the radio chains donate their facilities, Mr. Willkie will insist upon just as much free time to place his message before the country.

"The radio industry is a public utility and Mr. Willkie will insist that both major political parties be dealt with by the radio chains on a basis of equality. If the Republican Party is forced to pay for its time on the radio, there is no reason why the Democratic Party should not do the same."

The position was taken on the eve of the national convention, opening tomorrow in San Francisco, of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Already faced by a warning from the Senate Special Elections Committee that plans are under way by which Nation-wide commercial programs would be placed at the disposal of "certain candidates" in violation of the Hatch "clean politics" law, a spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters said:

"The radio industry will not lend itself to any attempt to sidestep the Hatch Act or any other law. You can be sure that the code committee of the association, before our convention concludes, will adopt every possible safeguard to see that commercial broadcasters do not use their programs for exploitation of any candidates. It never has been done and it won't begin now."

Examination of the records of the radio chains showed that the Republican Party spent $823,257 in the 1936 Presidential campain while the Democrats spent $497,923.

To Attend Farm Parley

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 4. Expressing a desire to "learn all I can about" the problems of agriculture, Wendell L. Willkie will attend a major farm conference in Des Moines, Iowa, tomorrow.

First-hand viewpoints of Republican Governors and party and agricultural leaders from ten Midwestern States will be given to the Presidential nominee.

Willkie said that he wanted to "sit right down and talk with men who have been dealing with the problem."

Not until after the Des Moines conference, Willkie said, will he complete the farm section of the Presidential nomination acceptance address.

May See Hoover

There was a possibility that Willkie might go later to some lodge in Montana for a talk with former President Herbert Hoover. Willkie aides said that Hoover was ready to see the nominee if the latter could take the time from his campaign for a conference.

After meeting yesterday with party organization leaders, including Chairman Joe Martin of the National Committee, the candidate told reporters that all the expenditures for his campaign—including those by the regular party organization, the Willkie-for-President clubs and an independent group of Democrats—would total about $2,500,000. That total, he added, would be well under a $3,000,000 limitation provided in the Hatch Act.

The meeting, he said today in a statement, "resulted in the approval of budgets, departmentalizing of work and smoothing out of such minor kinks as there were in the organization.

"Everybody left with great enthusiasm, prepared to commence an active, aggressive organized campaign reaching to every precinct in the United States.

"Impressed With Zeal"

"I was greatly impressed with the zeal and desire for activity manifested."

Messages of support came to Willkie today from Rex Beach, the author; Robert T. Jones, jr., the golfer, and Stephen L. Pinckney, of Texas, who telegraphed that he had resigned as a delegate at large to the National Democratic Convention because of his opposition "to the threatened establishment of the dangerous third term precedent."

Representative White Appointed Director Of Republican Speakers' Bureau

Representative Dudley A. White, of Ohio, 38-year-old newspaper publisher, yesterday was appointed director of the speakers' bureau of the Republican National Committee.

WHITE

Announcement of the appointment by National Chairman Joseph W. Martin said that White was "regarded as one of the outstanding young men in positions of influence in the Republican Party." He is associate publisher of the Norwalk Reflector-Herald and vice president of the Sandusky Newspapers, Inc. Headquarters of the speakers' bureau will be in Chicago.

White was a delegate from Ohio to the 1928 Republican National Convention and an alternate to the 1932 convention. During the World War he served in the United States Navy and now is a member of the Naval Reserve and the American Legion. He was Ohio State commander of the American Legion in 1929-30. He is married and has two children.

Miami, Fla., Aug. 4 (AP).—The Democratic Party in Dade County pooh-poohs any chance of Wendell Willkie to register a showing here, but is taking steps to crack down on party bolters.

C. A. Hickok, secretary of the party's county committee, heads a five-man subcommittee to take legal action preventing Democratic adherents to Willkie's cause from voting in the Democratic primary two years hence or becoming a party candidate for office.

He acknowledged that Democrats might vote secretly as they pleased, but promised action against those whose desertion of the party becomes known.

The Republican National Committee announced yesterday a contribution of $6.81 for the Willkie campaign from a group of 22 Chicago men who called themselves the "Unemployed Crusaders."

The committee said a letter from the group read:

"These nickels, dimes and pennies probably deprive some member of our family of a slice of bread from the moment, but the future hopes of millions of our kind depend on the election of a man who understands what American life really is and the standard of living all Americans hope for."

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Associated Willkie Clubs of America announced today that Mrs. Henry Breckinridge, prominent in social service work, had been made acting chairman of the women's division of the clubs.

Oren Root, jr., chairman of the clubs, said also that nonpartisan clubs for the election of Willkie were being formed at the rate of 30 a day and that 700 already had been organized.

Manufacturers Urge Changes In Tax Laws

Would Allow Firms To Recover Cost of Special Defense Plants

The National Association of Manufacturers proposed yesterday that Congress amend the tax laws to permit companies engaged in manufacturing defense materials to recover the cost of special plants and equipment which might be "entirely worthless" at the end of the emergency.

This, the association said in a statement to the House Ways and Means Committee, would remove a "serious bottleneck now holding back progress of the national defense program."

"There is a dual advantage in reassuring manufacturers now that this special loss in defense facilities will be recognized for tax purposes," the statement continued. "First and foremost it will stimulate the rapid production of the equipment required for a modern, highly mechanized Army, Navy and Marine Corps. Secondly, a sound amortization provision will stimulate business activity, put idle men to work and produce badly needed tax revenues."

The association said it did not oppose enactment of an excess profits tax to help meet the cost of the defense program, but did not favor such a levy as a permanent part of the tax structure.

"Since the very beginning of the national emergency," the statement said, "businessmen have made clear their objections to 'profiteering.' A new excess profits tax, unless carefully drawn with due consideration for all the factors involved, might not necessarily prevent 'profiteering' and could seriously interfere with production for national defense."

Hindsight and Foresight

By HOLGAR J. JOHNSON

President, Institute of Life Insurance

AT a luncheon meeting I attended the other day the chairman announced a question period. The very first query from the floor was: "When I borrow on my life insurance policy, why do I have to pay interest? Am I not borrowing my own money?"

Inasmuch as several letters have asked the same question, I think it deserves an answer here. I can't cover the whole subject in this space, but I'll be glad to send a special memorandum to anyone who wants to go into the matter more thoroughly.

HERE, very briefly, is the situation. What insurance costs you is represented by the net amount you pay the insurance company. Now this net amount would be more if it were not for the interest earned by the investments represented by the reserves.

If you took any money out, you would be reducing the earning reserve funds by that amount, and if interest were not paid your premiums would have to go up. Otherwise the other policyholders would suffer—and remember that only one in 3 or 4 policyholders has a policy loan. Therefore you do not withdraw your own money. Instead you simply borrow against your share—just as if you were borrowing on some government bonds you owned or any other kind of collateral.

As to the matter of interest rates, the main points to remember here are, first, that the rate has to be written into your policy when you take it out and may be in effect for 50 years, in periods of high interest and low interest. Second, under the law the companies must charge the same rate of interest for small and large loans—whether the amount borrowed is $5 or $5000.

Most of the loans are small ones and lending institutions are accustomed to charge a much higher rate on small loans than on large ones.

Your life insurance company simply tries to strike an average which, over the years, is fair to borrowing and non-borrowing policyholders alike.

NOTE: In this regular Monday column, paid for at advertising rates, the Institute of Life Insurance has asked its president to discuss questions of interest to life insurance policyholders. Inquiries may be addressed to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

The Federal Diary:

Employe Relations Plan Completed

Sets Up Uniform Policy on Grievances Of U. S. Workers

By Edward Ryan

A uniform program for settling Government employe grievances, in the making for more than two years, is nearly ready for its debut, according to officials of the Civil Service Commission.

The job of preparing a uniform government policy toward the grievances of Federal employes fell to the Civil Service Commission and the Council of Personnel Administration after half a dozen personnel chiefs had submitted plans of their own in line with President Roosevelt's executive order of June, 1928.

The President's executive order set up the personnel positions in all the agencies affected by the Reorganization Act and said that their duties would include establishing methods for hearing and settling grievances, subject to approval of the agency heads and the Civil Service Commission.

Approval Expected

While the commisison is about ready to approve the uniform policy down to the last comma, it was indicated the document may make a circuit through the office of William H. McReynolds, the President's executive assistant for personnel, before the policy is announced. Later the commission will use the policy as a test outline to measure the grievance plans submitted by personnel officials.

Among the standard tests outlined in the policy, it was understood, are these:

Any agency grievance plan should recognize the right of employes to join associations of their own choosing and to present grievances without fear of reprisal.

In each agency, employes should share with officials the job of developing their grievance system and as a general rule employes and supervisors should be consulted before, rather than after, decisions are made which affect their welfare.

Should Be Put in Writing

The employe relations policy and the grievance program should be put in writing and made known to everyone in the organization. Any grievance case which goes beyond the employe's immediate supervisor should be recorded in writing.

While any grievance plan should concentrate responsibility for its operation in the personnel director's office, each supervisor should recognize his own responsibility to settle grievances promptly at the start, before they become serious enough to be taken to higher officials.

The plans should establish a simple, orderly procedure to permit taking grievance cases up through the agency with final appeal to the top administrator.

Before a final decision from the agency head, there should be opportunity to present the grievance case to a board of review, whose members would be employes of the executive branch of the Government.

Heat: Jacob Baker, head of the United Federal Workers, said that Washington's summer heat wave has renewed employe demands for passage of the Mead-McCormcak five-day week bill.

The "Penthouse personnel" of the Navy Department, who work in the fourth-floor structures atop the original Navy building, wrote in that they had been kept working in temperatures from 94 to 104, under a tin roof that acts like a radiator. Navy officials pointed out the department tours the building regularly on hot days and recommends that employes be released when heat becomes too intense for working.

There are persistent reports about a male government worker who thought his air-conditioned office was too good to miss on a hot Washington night. He peeled down as far as a pair of shorts and went to sleep on his desk. Still unconscious, he scared a charwomn into near-collapse, and finally came in, embarassed, for a mild reprimand.

Jobs: Defense needs have brought the Civil Service Commission to renew a search for stenographers and typists. Applications for the exam have to be in by August 15. The jobs include senior stenographer, $1,620 a year; senior typist, $1,440 a year; junior typist, $1,260 a year.

Other exams are open for civil engineers, with four salary grades from $2,600 to $4,600; electricians' helper, $4.70 to $5.66 a day; pipefitters' helper, $4.70 to $5.66 a day; sheet metal workers' helper, $4.51 to $5.47 a day, in the Washington Navy Yard.

Calendar: Members of the Treasury Department Recreation Association will sail on their annual moonlight cruise down the Potomac at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow. . . . The United Federal Workers entertainment committee will show the film, "Thunder Over Mexico," at 8 p. m. Friday in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills

War Reflected in Requests At Public, Congress Libraries

Reference Staff Can Read Morning Paper and Tell What Calls to Expect From Legislators, Says Dr. Evans

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

When the war situation is tense, people devote themselves to their newspapers and radios. When it relaxes slightly, they turn to the libraries for background material, with "Mein Kampf" rivaling a fiction best seller in demand.

This is the observation of Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the Public Library, and members of his staff, who have been watching the reading trends in relation to the war for the last ten months.

At the Library of Congress, where the Legislative Reference Service responds like a sensitive plant to the march of events, Dr. Luther A. Evans, director, says his staff "can read the morning paper and know what calls there will be from Congressmen by noon."

In both the Library of Congress and the Public Library, readers are harking back to World War No. 1 books on the military and naval history of that war and on its aviation and aces are in demand. There is also evidence of increased interest in what connection munitions makers had with this country's entrance into the war, shown in a demand for records of the testimony at Congressional hearings, says Dr. Bowerman.

The third term has been the subject of three pamphlets issued by this service. Requests for translations of Mexican newspapers' statements regarding the United States have followed the turning of attention toward this country's Southern neighbor.

Alien and Immigration legislation, information on subversive activities during the first World War and in recent years; facts regarding Secretary of State Hull's previous visits to Latin-American countries and precedents for such trips, have all been asked for.

Chandler, Smith Named for Senate Race in Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 4 (INS).—Kentucky's junior Senator, A. B. (Happy) Chandler, (Democrat), and Walter B. Smith, Republican attorney from Pinesville, will be Senatorial opponents in the November election, incomplete but apparently decisive returns from yesterday's primary showed tonight.

The State's nine incumbent Congressmen, including one Republican, also apparently were victorious. Tabulations showed they included Virgil Chapman (unopposed), A. J. May, Joe E. Bates, Nobel Gregory, Edward Creal, Brent Spence, Beverly M. Vincent, Emmet O'Neal and James M. Robsion, the latter Republican.

Opposing Robsion on the Democratic ticket, Bert Howland appeared the nominee. James Turner, H. Clell Hayes and Lewis Mathr were the apparent Republican victors. William D. Rogers, Republican, was unopposed in one district, and the Republicans had no candidate in three others.

for the Department of Justice said the 2,871 complaints reported by Hoover as being received on one day last May constituted a fair average for the entire period—a total of 18,585 "national defense matters" required "investigative activity."

Of a list of "some 800 factories" furnished the FBI by the War and Navy Departments and therefore classified as vital, the bureau has surveyed 270 and made recommendations to officials for "maximum" protection, Hoover said.

"The FBI has no interest in employer-employe relationship and its sole concern is bolstering the physical protective facilities in manufacturing plants and establishments," Hoover declared.

Hoover estimated that some 12,000 factories will be surveyed by the FBI.

For five years before 1938, Hoover reported, the FBI investigated an average of 35 espionage cases yearly. In 1938, the number jumped to 250 nad in 1939 to 1,651. The biggest increase followed a plea by President Roosevelt for all law enforcement agencies to refer espionage and sabotage reports to the FBI.

A complaint of espionage does not always result in a case, it was explained at the Department of Justice, and, though all complaints are investigated, many are entirely unfounded.

Some cases, it was said, may require a year's investigation during which a suspect may be watched to find out all his connections. An immediate arrest, in such cases, might enable employers and associates of the suspect to escape detection entirely.

The conference of State officials is expected to gear Federal and State law enforcement agencies into a single program of sabotage and espionage control and also to devise a means whereby the States can be most effective in helping the Federal Government with operation of the Alien Registration Act.

Jackson to Speak

Ellwood J. Turner, chairman of the board of the Council of State Governments, one of the organizations sponsoring the conference, said State governments were being urged to delay action on any move to bolster the national defense until the needs and policy of the Federal Government are known.

Attorney General Robert Jackson will open the conference in the Great Hall of the Department of Justice. Other speakers will be Hoover and John Lord O'Brian, who was in charge of the war emergency division of the department during the last war.

Gov. William H. Vanderbilt, of Rhode Island, will preside. Invitations to the conference also have been accepted by Gov. Frank Dixon, of Alabama; Ralph Carr, Colorado; Raymond Baldwin, Connecticut; E. D. Rivers, Georgia; Sam Houston Jones, Louisiana; Herbert R. O'Conor, Maryland; Paul B. Johnson, Mississippi; Roy Cochran, Nebraska; Harry Moore, New Jersey; Burnet Maybank, South Carolina; Prentice Cooper, Tennessee; George Aiken, Vermont; James Price, Virginia, and Homer Holt, West Virginia.

Death Topic Of Catholic Guild Speaker

Evidence Meetings Attract Throngs To D. C. Parks

Washington Catholic Evidence Guild meetings again drew large crowds in local parks yesterday afternoon and evening.

Among the principal speakers was the Rev. A. J. Raines, assistant pastor of St. Martin's Catholic Church, 1908 North Capitol street northwest, who told an audience in Franklin Park in the afternoon to reflect seriously upon the subject of death.

"We shall be judged and we know not how; we shall be placed and we know not where; we shall die at God's bidding, and we shall be judged by a just God," said he. "Either hell or heaven is sure to be ours."

Discussing "Papal Supremacy" last night in Public Library Park, Gerard R. Hageman said:

"A leader is an absolute necessity in any cause. When the leader is divinely appointed, his supremacy is undeniable and adherence to him becomes a necessity."

Speaking of "Infallibility" during the afternoon in Franklin Park, John H. McDonald declared:

"To speak without error in matters of faith and morals; to guard men from error in religious matters; such is the gift of infallibility."

The general public attended the meetings, and queried the speakers afterward.

Educators Plan Defense Drive

Schoolmen to Study Means of Spreading Patriotic Ideals

Steps to form a national coordinating committee on education and defense will be taken at a meeting today, called by the National Education Association and the American Council on Education.

Fifty-five national organizations, dealing with educational affairs, have been invited to send representatives to the session, which will start at 9:30 a. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

An executive committee to be a spokesman for education in national defense matters will be formed, if the group decides to organize along the lines contemplated.

This committee, a small "working unit" standing ready to consult with Government officials and agencies, will probably hold its first meeting tomorrow.

Dr. Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of N. E. A., and Dr. George F. Zook, president, American Council on Education, jointly issued the call for the meeting.

As another phase of its proposed program, the committee would further a Nation-wide movement of education for citizenship in a democracy. Committees for "home defense" in communities throughout the land would coordinate activities of patriotic, church, civic and educational groups in promoting democracy.

Clipper Arrvies In N.Y., D.C. Woman Among 25 Aboard

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 4.—The Yankee Clipper completed the 200th transatlantic crossing by flying boats of Pan American Airways when it glided down to the marine base at LaGuardia Field this morning.

Among the 25 passengers was Miss Carolyn R. Nash, of Washington, D. C., who drove an ambulance for the American Hospital in Paris. She told of a scarcity of food in the old French capital and said she saw French prisoners in camps who were "badly in want of food."

Miss Nash said the French had accepted German occupation "with resignation." The Germans, she reported, had destroyed the Edith Cavell monument in the Tuileries, off the Place de la Concordia, and were removing lamp posts to obtain brass as a war material.

She described the German soldiers in Paris as "correct and arrogant."

CCC Accepts College Students Of Moderate Income Families

Change Expected to Bolster 'Morale' Of Corps, Transform It From 'Relief Agency Into a True Service Organization'

The CCC has opened its doors to college students whose families are in the moderate income group.

Recent regulations permitting this were defined yesterday by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt in a letter to James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard University Law School.

McNutt in reply to an inquiry from Landis, said the amendment was decided on following conferences with James J. McEntee, CCC director.

"Mr. McEntee recommended the change as a means of providing useful employment and vocational training for young men whose parents, while not on relief, are unable to give their sons the training needed to provide them a start in life," he said.

Concerning it, Landis had said:

"What this will do to the morale of the CCC is tremendously important, for by bringing into the corps others than persons from relief families, the corps can be capable of supplying the needs of this country in matters of national defense and industrial rehabilitation."

McEntee emphasized that priority had always been given young men in the order of need, and this policy will still be in force. Landis said many teachers were ready to urge young men from colleges "to volunteer for labor in the field, forest and workshops as their contribution to the general strengthening of the Nation in this time of emergency."

Auto Workers' Union (CIO) Favors Roosevelt 3d Term

St. Louis, Aug. 4 (INS).—After an hour of heated debate, the CIO United Auto Workers convention late today adopted a resolution endorsing a third term for President Roosevelt.

Third term opponents argued fiercely against adoption, stating again and again that the resolution was a "kick in the teeth for John L. Lewis," who recently broke over matters of policy with the President.

Supporters of the resolution said the question of Lewis' leadership was not involved. Walter Reuther, international executive board member, summarized their sentiment with the statement:

"Let Lewis lead the CIO, and Roosevelt lead the Nation."

to order the National Guard to active duty, to come up in the Senate today.

The Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, on which the Senate Military Committee is scheduled to vote today, possible prelude to a historic oratorical clash on the Senate floor.

Emergency defense appropriation measure, carrying $4,963,000,000, subject of hearings opening today before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee.

Excess profits taxation, under study by the House Ways and Means Committee, which has been urged by the President to hasten its action.

Secretary Knox declared in his radio address:

"Our hope of quarantining this vast struggle (the European war) and keeping it out of the Western Hemisphere rests almost entirely on the success of our efforts to build our defenses on such a scale and with enough speed that no combination of international brigands would dare to test our striking power."

He said that facing a "titanic struggle" for domination of the Western world, an "unprepared" United States is "isolated amid it—not from the turmoil and danger."

Regarding "the greatest problem of the hour: manpower," he said:

"We know from the experience of the last World War and from the tragic examples of the countries now conquered, that it takes as long to train men as it does to build machines. Obviously, then, if we are to protect ourselves, our integrity and this hemisphere we can take but one action:

"Adopt compulsory military training and adopt it now."

Assistant Secretary Patterson said plans for an Army of 1,300,000 contemplated protecting "an entire continent" with the same number of divisions as Britain has crowded into the United Kingdom, an area comparable to that of New England.

He said the War Department did not believe that a system of one-year voluntary enlistments, such as has been proposed, "would serve the purpose."

Voluntary enlistments are haphazard and catch men here and there by emotional appeals," he said. "The administration of universal service is orderly. It places men where they can be of most service to the country. It imposes no onus upon those not selected for duty with the armed forces."

Col. Adler declared that adequate manpower for adequate defense could be obtained only through selective compulsory law.

"A deadline for America has arrived," he said, "a deadline forcing us to decide whether we shall gamble with our national security or whether we shall marshal all our manpower to protect the integrity of our country and the freedom of our institutions."

The question whether world conditions justified the Administration's defense program was debated on the American Forum of the Air by Senators Lee (Democrat), Oklahoma; Hill (Democrat), Alabama; Nye (Republican), Indiana, and Representative Fish (Republican), New York. All spoke from Washington.

Lee and Hill urged speedy enactment of the program to protect the Western Hemisphere against possible invasion. Nye and Fish cautioned against fear that the United States was in imminent danger.

He cited appropriation by Congress of $10,000,000 for war materiel, including tanks and airplanes, and asked:

"Who will operate these planes and tanks—who will man our guns—unless we train a sufficient number of men?"

He concluded with this admonition: "Train without fighting now, or fight without training later."

Dr. David issued a statement for the youth commission, in which reliance on voluntary enlistments to build the Nation's armed forces was warned against as too slow.

use this alternative. He appealed to the Guardsmen for private cars. Ten were volunteered and the 80 men were jammed into these.

Nor was that all the grief for the regiment.

Two trucks broke down. One, carrying a 12-inch gun and the baggage of Battery C, had to be sent back to Washington; the other was repaired and managed to make the first night's camp.

Thus the 260th, largest of the District units en route to the Plattsburg training grounds, finally reached camp after dark with 11 3-inch guns, four searchlights, 19 station wagons, 41 trucks, 10 autos, one command car, one ambulance, and five motorcycles.

Many of the men didn't get to eat before 10 p. m., although mess had been prepared four hours before. Few slept under tents; most rolled into their blankets on the ground; and Battery C had to do the best it could without baggage.

The First Battalion of 104th Quartermaster Regiment, headed by Maj. Fletcher Bernsdorff, arrived here first, but also late. They found Northumberland in a Fourth of July mood. Citizens lined the streets and packed themselves with perspiring enthusiasm on the town's central square. Many of them had been there since noon, awaiting the big trucks which began rolling in shortly after 6 p. m.

While they spread their tents in a cut-over wheat field just north of town, another 1,000 District Guardsmen on two trains were speeding toward Heuvelton, N. Y., near Plattsburg, where all eventually will join 100,000 Guardsmen and Regulars from other States in the Nation's greatest peacetime concentration of troops. By road and rail they streamed northward from almost every town of consequence in the East.

On the field where the 260th camped the crowds milled expectantly and silently watched the trucks and guns and searchlights when the trucks waddled through the soft earth to their stations. The 104th went beyond Northumberland after refueling just outside of town, to Danville, where the men tumbled into bed, asleep almost before their tents were up.

Tomorrow both outfits will pull out before 7 a. m., the 260th bounnd for Watkins Glen, N. Y.; the 104th for Syracuse, N. Y. The 104th will continue on to the Plattsburgh maneuver area, while the 260th turns off to Fort Ontario, Oswego, N. Y., for a week of practice firing of its long guns with live ammunition. Then it will join the Twenty-ninth Division near Plattsburg for training with the division, the Third Corps and the First Army.

The 104th, escorted by a motorcycle policeman, pulled away shortly after 7 a. m. today from Camp Sims in 14 trucks, 3 motorcycles, a command car and nine private automobiles.

HERTHQUAKE NEARS END. There'll be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth next week-end among the fanciers of boogie-woogie rhythm. For Milt Herth and his Herthquakers will finish their Neptune Room engagement on Friday night. Previous commitments require their presence in Syracuse on Saturday. It's hoped they'll be back in the fall. (That should make them "The Boys from Syracuse.")

Hollywood is also calling the Herth group. Milt tells us that his agent is excited over prospects of placing the trio in a forthcoming major production. If the deal is closed the Herthians, after working on the big picture, will remain on in Hollywood to do five musical shorts on which contracts already have been signed. It looks as though there'll be a popular Herthquake in California.

Rainbow Room Changes. Tony Gaudio is temporarily taking over the drums in the Rainbow Room. Ralph Cannon, now playing on the S. S. Mt. Vernon, will then take over the singer-drummer spot in the Rainbow Room.

IT'S "ANCHORS AWAY" for Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, who's off for a month's vacation. Frankie Meyer, clever young accordionist, will sub for Matt while he's away. After a few days in Manhattan, Matt will go to the Adirondacks where he plans to visit four or five resorts. He and Mrs. Windsor also plan to have a second honeymoon at Niagara Falls.

THE CURRENT REVUES. Shoreham Terrace. Weldon Barr, "legamaniac," arrives today. He must be terrifically good because he was held over for six months at "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom's club in Hollywood and has appeared in every major theater in the country. Also new are the Arnaut Brothers, international funsters. The Mangean Girls are held over. St. Clair and Day enter the eighth week of their record-cracking Terrace engagement. Next week they'll go to the State Theater in New York, returning to the Terrace on the following week.

Lotus. A cunning midget maid, Yvonne Moray, just 40 inches tall, will be the dancing star of the Tom Ball Revue starting today. There'll also be Paul and Pettit, ballroom steppers; Marjory Jane and Bobby Wilde in a novelty act; the Margo Sisters, adagioettes.

Casino Royal. Jack Morgan,

VIOLET MANGEAN,
Diamond Horseshoe dancer, now appearing on the Shoreham Terrace

emcee-singer-dancer-comedian, will head "Four Queens and a Jack." There's also a group of bright specialty acts, dance music by the irrepressible and unpredictable "Jivin' Jack" Schaeffer and his orchestra.

Maryland Club Gardens. The "Dancing Debs' Revue" makes a lovely picture as it performs directly over the aquamarine waters of the pool. Besides the Debs there are the Two Flos in "Dancing at the Woodside" (it's 1940-ish, not classical), Lorenzo in Cuban songs, the Fernandos' Marionettes and Yvonne Logan, the gay young mistress of ceremonies and singer.

John L. Lewis and Senator Guffey often lunch together in the Mayflower. Their favorite is directly under the portrait of George Washington. Please roll your own comment.

AT THE RIVIERA. All the luscious debs that frolic at the Riviera are dancing in little sports frocks during the hot weather. Come September they'll all be blossoming out in fancy confections . . . Harriet Derck sings "The Lorelei," a little masterpiece of innuendo. We hear she played tennis every day when the theremometer hovered at 100. What a girl! . . . There are Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler (she's the former Jane Eustis)—chattering with Pete Macias. Probably complimenting him on the way he does those "Louisiana Purchase" tunes . . . And here's "Ha-Cha" Gardner, of the Mayflower, full of plans for going to Cuba in September.

TO ARTHUR HERBERT, head music man of the Starlight Roof. Thanks evaire so much for the amusing little statuette made out of champagne corks. We don't know whether to christen it the "Little Man Who Wasn't There" or "The Man Who Comes Around."

GLEN ECHO PASTS. Many quaint things seem to have happened to the lads of Paul Kain's Glen Echo band . . . Trumpeter Lonnie Wilfong was once a deck hand on an American freighter . . . Trombonist George Smith was born in the Florida Everglades . . . Saxaphonist Jim Fitzpatrick is a member of the bar, says he took up music "because I was hungry." He's never hungry now judging by the way he destroys steaks in Dick's Grill . . . The exception is Trumpeter Jack Torry who says, "Nothing ever happens to me."

Oscar of the Hi Hat is toying dispassionately with the idea of inventing a new cocktail named in honor of the political situation. He says he won't call it the "Roosevelt" or the "Willkie." He thinks he'll just call it the "Presidential."

AROUND MAYFAIR. "Mousey" Garner's current obsession is that he's Al Jolson. Anyway, Jolson could never do any bigger or better hollering of "Ma-a-ammy!" than our little friend, "Mousey," is doing these eves . . . A puzzling young man is Singer Sammy Richardson. He looks like Joe E. Brown when he sings and like Dick Dick Powell when he's quiet . . . Those pretty girls who sit in the corner of afternoons are likely to be Nadine's Co-Eds from Maryland Club Gardens.

NIGHTINGALE MUSICIANS claim they're on the point of losing their minds because of their nightly "Singaspell" stunt. The melody boys who have to cope with the audience in spelling are "Sir Oliver" Wilson, Nate Breeskin, "Brain Trust" Elkins and Mel Holober.

HARRINGTON SUPER-SERVICE. You can get service practically around the clock at the Harrington Tavern. There are tasty breakfasts, savory luncheons, delicious popular priced dinners and a big selection of snacks for the in-between and supper hours.

R.A.F. Planes Blast Port in Sardinia

Air and Sea Search Fails to Locate The Italian Fleet

By the Associated Press

Gibraltar (Monday), Aug. 5.—Pilots of British Swordfish planes told today of a devastating attack on the port of Cagliari, on the Italian island of Sardinia, after they had vainly searched the entire Western Mediterranean by sea and air for any trace of the Italian navy.

The attack last Friday morning destroyed four Italian hangars and four planes on the ground and destroyed or badly damaged other aviation buildings. One of the cannon-armed, torpedo-carrying Swordfish planes was shot down and another was forced down and captured, while three Italian planes were shot out of the air, the British said.

The attack was made from British aircraft carriers which steamed out of Gibraltar with other fleet units Wednesday morning on the 800-mile trip to Sardinia.

Hood Leads Fleet

[The Madrid radio, in a broadcast heard in London tonight, reported the British fleet sailed from Gibraltar into the Mediterranean at 8 p. m., with the battle-cruiser Hood at its head.]

"The harbor was incredibly crowded," said one pilot. "Our first load of bombs dropped into the water but the second disposed of two flying boats we had sighted."

"Our first lot of bombs fell in the water," said another pilot. "The second hit the seawall, which was badly damaged, and the third on the hangars full of seaplanes.

Italians Grin at Them

"We encountered one Italian fighter when neither of us was in position to fire. The Italians grinned at us from 50 yards. One of my crew fired three times with his pistol and the Italian made off.

"Two other Italian fighters got into the air but did not come to grips with us. In fact, they helped the attackers because the archies (antiaircraft guns) ceased fire in order not to hit their own machines."

Italy Admits Loss of Sub

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 4.—Italy acknowledged the loss of another submarine and reported crippling air raids today on important British military objectives in the widely scattered "Battle for Africa."

[British sources said approximately 15 submarines, one cruiser, three destroyers and one store ship of Italy's navy have been destroyed since the war in the Mediterranean began June 10.

The Italian communique did not disclose any details of the loss.

The high command said its bombers aimed telling blows at Haiya, rail center 100 miles north of the border of Italian Eritrea, and the towns of Summitt and Erkowit, all in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Armored Train Bombed

In Kenya, a British armored motor train was reported bombed south of Wajir, highway junction 125 miles south of the Ethiopian border.

Still another raid was carried out against Zeila, port in British Somaliland on the Gulf of Aden, just south of Jibuti.

At Dobel, 28 miles south of the Italian-captured mud fortress of Moyale, the Italians said they counted 64 British dead, including three officers, from a repulsed British counter-attack last Friday.

(The British reported direct hits were scored on three ships and grounded Italian planes in "three highly successful raids" yesterday on the Derna harbor and airdrome.

(In Kenya, the British reported the capture of a small Italian post at the northwestern end of Lake Rudolf yesterday on the Abyssinian border. The British counted 37 Italians dead in a dispersed counterattack.)

British Deny Landings

London, Aug. 4 (AP).—Reports that British troops landed in the French African possessions, Madagascar an dthe Cameroons, were denied today.

Officials said, however, that interest reported to be shown by Nazis in the French West African port of Dakar was regarded as especially serious—possibly foretelling large scale German action in and from French African territory.

Attack on Suez Forecast

Rome, Aug. 4 (INS).—The "most destructive blow imaginable" against the British empire by Italy's land, sea and air forces in Libya, attacking Egypt and the Suez Canal, is about to be launched, it was predicted tonight by the Fascist newspaper Corriere Della Sera.

is swinging toward the air offensive.

With every night now lengthening the hours of dakness to cover raiding bomber squadrons, this source predicted:

"Germany is out for a bigger headache than she has yet suffered."

Leaflet raids, patrol work over the Low Countries, and hundreds of bombing visits into the Ruhr Valley and beyond were said to have trained British pilots how to grope through the dark to targets anywhere in Greater Germany.

The British attackers were pictured as practiced in gliding in silently, motors cut off, and striking before ground defense forces were aware of their presence.

The British plan apparently is to increase the size of their raiding squadrons.

"It's clear that Germany's war machine has suffered a tremendous hammering," one source said, "and night bombing can be made even more shattering by larger formations of British aircraft.

"Military objectives well beyond the Ruhr will be within the range of Whitley heavy bombers during the longer hours of darkness."

For all the preparations to extend the air offensive, the British gave evidence of heeding Prime Minister Churchill's warning on the eve of the high tide week that the Nazis may only be seeking to catch England off balance by talk that no immediate invasion is in prospect.

"The possibility of German invasion has by no means passed away," Churchill declared, "and our sense of growing strength and preparedness must not lead to the slightest relaxation of vigilance or moral alertness."

Britain's defenses were in action Saturday night and Sunday morning against Nazi raiders who bombed the Thames Estuary, Wales and eastern Scotland.

Britain Arrests More Japanese

Domei and the Eastern News Service.

[A Hongkong dispatch from the Associated Press reported arrest of Geturo Yamaguchi, a Japanese merchant.]

At the same time it was learned that three weeks ago, before any Britons had been arrested in Japan, two other Japanese had been detained here by the British authorities.

They were Takayuki Eguchi, an employe of the bank of Formosa, and Mrs. Milley Yoshi, German-born wife of a Japanese painter. These two, it was said, were picked up purely as a matter of routine and their interests were being looked after by the Japanese Consul General, who has been allowed to see and interview all prisoners held here, including Makishara and Tanabe.

When Shigemitsu called upon the foreign secretary today he was able to inform Viscount Halifax that four more Britons who had been taken into custody in Japan had been released, leaving five who are still being held. The latest released were said to be E. W. James, a Kobe businessman, a Mr. Sandford, who was taken in custody in Korea, Thomas Ellis and a Mr. Rich, whose addresses and connections were not given.

Sir John Anderson, the home secretary, it was learned late tonight has signed orders for the deportation of Eguchi and Mrs. Yoshi who were arrested July 13.

The whole matter of Anglo-Japanese relations and the unexpectedly bad turn they have taken since Britain extended the olive branch in the form of the Tientsin agreement and the closing of the Burma Road, is expected to be the subject of a Government statement when the House of Commons reconvenes Tuesday.

Strong Protest Expected

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo, Aug. 4—Foreign Minister Matsuoka was expected today to lodge a strong protest with British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, while the Japanese press assailed the British arrest of two leading Japanese businessmen in London as patent retaliation for the wholesale round up of Britons in Japan.

Domei, official Japanese news agency, warned that the incident might have graver consequences than last year's nation-wide anti-British demonstrations over the Tientsin crisis, and the newspaper Hochi urged the government to recall its Ambassador as retaliation.

Military quarters were said to be demanding strong anti-British action.

Japan Demands Indo-China Bases

which is planning economic exploitation of Indo-China.

It is understood here that Japan has made secret demands upon the French regime at Hanoi including:

1. The right to move Japanese troops across Indo-China territory in case the Chungking government's armies appear at the Indo-China or Yunnan boundaries.

2. The right of Japanese naval planes to base at Haiphong and other harbors.

3. The right of Japanese planes, military and commercial, to fly over all portions of Indo-China.

4. That Japanese naval experts must be given control over all incoming and outgoing tonnage of the ports of northern and central Indo-China.

5. That all French work on fortifications and defenses must be stopped immediately.

6. That the French government and commercial circles in northern and central Indo-China must consider Japan their most friendly power and must give the Japanese full support in the development of trade enterprises.

Already Japanese military inspectors who ostensibly are only examining and controlling China-bound cargoes, have surveyed all the highway routes from Indo-China into Yunnan and made estimates of the amount of military traffic possible over the Indo-China-Yunnan Railway.

As they solidify their position in Indo-China the Japanese are rapidly coming into a position easily to attack the Yunnan and Southern Szechuen area, in which the Chungking government is now developing essential war industries.

If these areas are laid to waste by bombings or invaded by the Japanese army, the Chungking regime would probably be forced to remove into the northwest, presumably making Lanchow the next wartime capital.

Indies Policy in Making

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Aug. 4.—Japan's policy toward the Dutch East Indies is expected to take shape quickly. Foreshadowings in the press suggest that it will take the form primarily of energetic measures aimed to replace from the Dutch East Indies those supplies of oil and scrap now restricted in America.

The inner Japanese cabinet will confer tomorrow on a projected mission to Batavia after overseas minister, Gen. Koiso, has explained the plan to Premier Prince Konoye.

While holding office in the last cabinet Gen. Koiso strongly urged for a solution of the "southward question." Becoming dissatisfied with the cabinet's inaction, he drafted a plan himself. This plan will be placed before the inner cabinet tomorrow.

In a press interview today Gen. Koiso revealed that he is concerned not only with materials, but with the international situation. Saying greater economic cooperation has become absolutely necessary, he pointed out that the Dutch East Indies produce 8,000,000 tons of oil yearly and more scrap than Japan consumes. He added significantly that Japan's policy toward the Axis powers and the United States and Great Britain must first be decided, owing to the complications caused by Germany's occupation of Holland.

Pershing Urges U. S. to Rush 50 Destroyers to Help Britain

So the time has come when we must rise up as a united people to make secure our country's independence and our great inheritance of constitutional liberty.

"More than half the world is ruled by men who despise the American idea and have sworn to destroy it. They know that while one great people remains independent and free because it is strong and is brave, they can never crush finally the people they have conquered. The example of liberty here will always continue to inspire the resistance to tyranny over there. They are fanatical and they are strong. They are efficient and they are ruthless. Eight nations have tried to appease them. The appeasers of eight nations are dead or in jail or discredited and ruined. In seven of these eight nations the appeasers who would not take the danger seriously, who would not prepare when there was still time, have led their countries to disaster.

"It is not 'hysterical' to insist that democracy and liberty are threatened. With democracy and liberty overthrown on the continent of Europe, only the British are left to defend democracy and liberty in Europe.

"By sending help to the British, we can still hope with confidence to keep the war on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean, where the enemies of liberty, if possible, should be defeated. But some are bold about what they would do tomorrow, if Great Britain is defeated, and the war comes to this hemisphere. I say to you solemnly that tomorrow may be forever too late to keep war from the Americas. Today may be the last time when by measures short of war we can still prevent war.

"We must be ready to meet force with a stronger force. We must make ourselves strong by building up our Army and Navy and the establishment of the principle of universal selected service, which means merely that the men needed are chosen by lot.

"And I am telling you tonight, because it is my duty to warn you before it is too late, that the British navy needs destroyers and small craft to convoy merchant ships, to escort its warships, to hunt submarines and to repel invasion. We have an immense reserve of destroyers left over from the other war, and in a few months the British will be completing a large number of destroyers of their own. The most critical time, therefore, is the next few weeks and months. If there is anything we can do to help save the British fleet during that time, we shall be failing in our duty to America if we do not do it.

"If a proper method can be found, America will safeguard her freedom and security by making available to the British or Canadian governments at least fifty of the overage destroyers which are left from the World War. If the destroyers help save the British fleet, they may save us from the danger and hardship of another war. Americans should not shrink from duty because of possible hazards.

"I know that many sincere patriots are frightened at the thought of even the smallest act because they think such acts would lead us closer to the day when another American Expeditionary Force sets sail for Europe. It is my opinion that in this war it would be absolute folly even to consider sending another expeditionary force. No one is considering it and considering it are deceiving themselves and deceiving you.

"We must have the strength of those who may say that anyone is character to face the truth. Foremost among the truths which we will ignore at our peril is that the time needed to build our own defenses may be lengthened if we have the courage to make the small but important contribution which is still within our power toward the sustaining of the British defense.

"A new kind of war is loose in the world—fought with all weapons, including treason, and fought most insidiously during what some of our countrymen call "peacetime." It is a war against the civilization that we know. It is a revolution against all the values which we have cherished and which we wish our children to cherish in the future. It is a revolution which denies the dignity of man and which banishes the hope of brotherhood and comradeship on earth. We can see it developing right before our very eyes.

"It must be faced with daring and with devotion. We must lift up our strong hearts. We must reaffirm our noble tradition. We must make ourselves so strong that the tradition we live by shall not perish from the earth."

and expenditures.

"It is stated to be his opinion that these limitations are avoidable by subdividing contributions, such as dividing contribution between different candidates on the same ticket, dividing them between the National Committee and various local committees, even though engaged in promoting the same national ticket, and by dividing them between campaign clubs or special committees and the regular national committee.

"The Department of Justice will not render advisory interpretations of the Hatch Act or of other laws for political parties or others. But silence in the face of the widely published opinion of Mr. Fletcher might mislead well-intentioned persons to believe it to be an accepted interpretation of the Hatch Act.

"Hence it is fair to state now that no plan of this nature for avoiding the limitations of the Hatch Act are accepted or approved by the Department of Justice."

Wendell L. Willkie, at Colorado Springs, said Saturday that he had not had time to study Mr. Fletcher's opinion, but that he did not believe the total expenditures of his campaign would reach $3,000,000 and that they probably would not exceed $2,500,000.

Meanwhile, Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Republican), of Massachusetts and chairman of the Republican National Committee, named Representative Dudley A. White (Republican), of Ohio, as director of the speakers' division of the Republican National Committee.

with Europe after the war is over.

He advocated noninterference in the internal affairs of Europe but said he believed it "of the utmost importance" for the United States to cooperate with Europe.

A war between the hemispheres, he said, could easily last for generations, and bring all civilization tumbling down. An agreement, he said, could maintain civilization and peace throughout the world as far into the future as we can see.

"But we are often told that if Germany wins the war, cooperation will be impossible, and treaties no more than scraps of paper," he said. "I reply that cooperation is never impossible when there is sufficent gain on both sides, and that treaties are seldom torn apart when they do not cover a weak nation.

"I would be among the last to advocate depending upon treaties for our national safety. I believe that we should rearm fully for the defense of America, and that we should never make the type of treaty that would lay us open to invasion if it were broken. But if we refuse to consider treaties with the dominant nation of Europe, regardless of who that may be, we remove all possibility of peace."

Boat Cruise Planned

"Patriotic night" will be observed by the Treasury Department Recreation Association tomorrow night on a ride down the Potomac River on the Steamer Mount Vernon, which will leave its wharf at 8:30 o'clock. The program will include patriotic singing.

Limited Campaign Costs

Wendell L. Willkie's determination to keep the expenses of his campaign well within the limits set by the Hatch Act is especially to be commended in view of the ease with which legislative restrictions upon campaign contributions could be legally circumvented.

Henry P. Fletcher, counsel for the Republican National Committee, believes there are innumerable ways of getting around the restrictions upon individual contributions and upon outlays by the national committees. Attorney General Jackson takes exception to the Fletcher statement. These differing interpretations suggest that the law is no watertight guarantee against excessive political spending.

In Mr. Fletcher's opinion donations to an independently organized Willkie-McNary committee would not have to be included in the $3,000,000 limitation upon the expenditures of the Republican National Committee.

It happens that for reasons of political strategy the G. O. P. nominee prefers to keep the Willkie-for-President clubs and the independent Democratic movement entirely separate from the national Republican organization. Under Mr. Fletcher's interpretation, this segregation might be made an excuse for spending more than the amount allowed the national committee under the Hatch Act.

The Republican candidate's decision to rely heavily upon volunteer aid also sets a good example of spending restraint for the State and local committees which are specifically exempted from the Hatch Act's limitations on contributions. Mr. Fletcher believes a donor is free to give any amount he sees fit to a State or local committee. These committees are not restricted in the amounts they may pass on to other organizations. It is expected that they will rely upon direct contributions instead of being supplied with funds through the national committee.

The new setup will change the character of the coming campaign to a considerable extent, placing much greater responsibility upon local organizations and increasing the importance of local financial support in doubtful States and communities. Campaign costs may thus be reduced, although there is no positive assurance to that effect.

In any event, the firm stand taken by Mr. Willkie provides greater protection against excessively high outlays than the vague provisions of the Hatch Act.

Churchill's Warning

When the French armies collapsed last June it was taken for granted that the long-threatened Nazi invasion of England would be undertaken almost immediately and with the same devastating force that, in so short a time, had overwhelmed the Low Countries and France.

The British people steeled themselves for the shock. But after six weeks of waiting for it to come the invasion has not yet occurred. The German high command has contented itself with daily air raids of British centers and an intensification of naval and aerial attacks on British shipping.

These efforts have resulted in an unknown amount of damage, taken an undisclosed toll of lives. But they obviously have not broken British resistance. Nor do they appear to have made the task of invading the British Isles any easier. In the meantime, the British have replied to German aerial attacks by destructive bombings in Germany and German-held territory.

One danger which the British now face is that they may become overconfident regarding their impregnability and assume that, because Hitler has held off striking for six weeks, he will hold off indefinitely. Such an attitude might prove fatal and the Axis powers know it. That is why the almost daily announcements in the German and Italian press of the imminence of the zero hour has now been followed, particularly in Italy, by statements that the Axis has no intention of invading Great Britain at all, but will, instead, seek to starve out that kingdom.

In part this propaganda may reflect German and Italian unwillingness to take the great risks that are undoubtedly involved in a frontal attack on the British bastion, bolstered as it still is by preponderant sea power. It may be also, however, a move in what Edmond Taylor has called the "strategy of terror," an attempt to sow confusion in the minds of the British with the ultimate aim of catching them off their guard.

It is hardly surprising, then, that Prime Minister Winston Churchill has seen fit to warn every Briton to maintain the strictest vigilance against the continued danger of an attempted German invasion. That danger, he has told his fellow countrymen, has "by no means passed away."

The British have had six weeks to prepare for the worst. They still have a long way to go before all danger of a successful attack against them has been removed. This, as Premier Churchill has made clear, is no time for them to become complacent about the outlook. To do so would be playing Hitler's game.

District Senators

Controversy over the Sumners resolution has already been narrowed down to one major issue: Shall the District of Columbia be represented in the Senate?

It was inevitable that this question should arise. Yet it is strange that it should be brought forward by the House Judiciary Committee. Surely the Senate is in a better position than the House to decide whether the District should be represented there. Representative Sumners' committee would have done better to have passed his resolution in its original form, so that extended discussion of this issue could have been left to the body most immediately concerned.

As matters stand, Chairman King of the Senate District Committee would be well advised to proceed immediately with hearings on the resolution. Regardless of what action the House may take, the Senate will wish to study this proposal carefully. It should have the guidance of public hearings in that task. The sooner such hearings are held the better will be the prospect of submitting this proposed constitutional amendment to the States before the adjournment of Congress.

No one who examines the argument which appears to have brought about amendment of the Sumners resolution in the House committee will question the need for a public airing of this issue. Congressman Reed, of Illinois, sponsored that change. He also intends to fight any move on the floor of the House to give the District representation in the Senate. His contention is that Senators represent the governments of the various States, and that, since Congress is the government of the District, it needs no such representation.

Apparently Mr. Reed has forgotten the Seventeenth Amendment. It provides that "the Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years . . ." By no stretch of the imagination could it be said that Democratic Senator Guffey, for example, represents the Republican regime in Pennsylvania. Senators are answerable only to the people of the States who elect them.

It is true, of course, that the election of Senators from the District would be an innovation in our system of government. Only the States now exercise that privilege. But this slight modification of the rules governing representation in the Senate would certainly be more in keeping with the principles of American government than is the denial of suffrage to a city of 663,000 inhabitants.

There is no advantage in clinging rigidly to an arbitrary formula which has come to frustrate, in this particular area, the principles which the Constitution was intended to preserve. The watchword of our day is flexibility in government. It is the essence of democracy and freedom that we must uphold, not a fixed pattern that may be outworn.

The basic question which Congress ought to decide is whether the genius of the American system would be impaired or strengthened by granting to the District privileges already enjoyed by many States with fewer inhabitants. Shall we make an adjustment to effectuate the spirit of the Constitution or cling to the letter which no longer serves the cause of government by consent of the governed? If the resolution is debated in these fundamental terms, it is impossible to believe that Washingtonians will be granted only partial suffrage rights.

Poor Man's Justice

The recently issued report of the Small Claims Court, which drew the commendation of Attorney General Jackson, demonstrates the continued service rendered by this tribunal to persons of small means. During June 1,784 cases were filed. The upper limit for claims in the court is $50, but 269 of the total were for less than $10.

One major function of this court is the dispensing of justice to those who cannot pay for legal counsel. In June, 307 cases were filed by plaintiffs without attorney, and in 245 of these the papers were prepared by the clerk of the court. Judge Armond Scott reported that the clerk assisted 495 persons.

In 72 of the contested cases the presiding judge found for the plaintiff, and in 69 for the defendant. Stays of execution, authorizing installment payments, were granted for 204 persons in needy circumstances. Cases settled without trial were 133.

Since its establishment, in 1938, the court has found a way to safeguard the interests of the poor man by inviting employers to set up claims for exemption from garnishment, by eliminating the need for motions to quash and affidavits of defense. It has instituted an economical method of serving processes by registered mail.

An important consideration for taxpayers is the fact that the Small Claims Court is doing excellent work without costing the public a penny. Although it has reduced its already small fees, it continues to be self-supporting.

Defense Housing

Housing may be less essential to national security at the moment than are airplane and munitions factories; nevertheless, it is an important part of any well-rounded defense program. When workers are suddenly shifted in large numbers to ship-building centers and industrial areas they must have decent living quarters for themselves and families. If housing is inadequate or of a very poor character, a heavy labor turnover may interfere with efficient production in defense industries.

Congress should therefore prepare to meet emergency housing needs that are not likely to be supplied by private industry. This does not mean, however, that slum-clearance programs in progress throughout the country should be suddenly diverted to the use of workers in defense industries. Nor does it mean that the policies under which dwellings are built and rented to slum dwellers can be applied to the housing of navy-yard or munition-plant workers. A new approach is in order.

Notable advantages may be derived from the use of existing housing agencies to direct the new program. But that will only accentuate the necessity of keeping slum clearance and defense housing in separate categories. In some instances only temporary housing will be called for. It would be wasteful, for example, to build a large number of permanent homes in a ship-building center where the need for such housing may be limited to a few years. On the other hand, it would be foolish to build temporary dwellings in a large and growing city already plagued by slums, as is Washington.

The District Alley Dwelling Authority plans to hasten the construction of 1,600 dwelling units for defense workers here if the funds are forthcoming. None of these would be temporary structures. They would be used to offset temporary shortage of decent quarters for low-income families brought here by the rearmament program. And when the emergency is over they would be turned over to families from the slums with subsidized rentals.

There is no provision, however, for subsidies in the local defense housing plan. The ADA would charge standard rents amounting to one-fifth of the incomes of tenants with the lowest wages and one-fourth of the incomes of other tenants. If these rents should produce more than enough to pay the expenses of the project and amortize the loan over 60 years, a shorter period of amortization would be provided.

That arrangement is basically sound. No housing subsidy should be granted to workers in national defense industries. It would be unfair to taxpayers and other industrial employes to set up a system of special housing benefits for one group of workers.

This feature of the new program should especially appeal to Congress which has thus far refused to extend the heavily subsidized slum-clearance activities of the United States Housing Authority. The bill now awaiting action in the House would provide $250,000,000 for defense housing loans to local authorities but it makes no allowance for Federal contributions to reduce rents. Regardless of how the slum-clearance policy may later be modified, approval of this bill appears to be necessary to avoid delay in our preparedness efforts.

The Wired Juke

The telephonic juke may come to Washington. Impressed with the success of this innovation in Detroit, the operators are said to be planning an invasion of the District before moving on Manhattan.

The juke-box is that Wellsian device which, after the deposit of a nickel and the proper manipulation of various dials and buttons, furnishes selected music and sometimes a weird display of colored lights to patrons of amusement centers.

As described in Time Magazine, the telephonic juke is controlled from a central office. Frequenters of 32 Detroit night spots can drop their nickels in the slots and telephone their requests. In the studio the numbers desired are selected from 8,000 records and piped back to the fans.

The telephonic juke not only provides a wider selection, but also extends the individual's power to impose his tastes on others. For it has been discovered that a patron may have his selection played in any place of amusement on the chain—with dedication to any person he suspects may be present. As Time points out, there are possibilities in complimenting acquaintances publicly with such titles as "Ain't You 'Shamed!" and "Get Out of Town."

The telephonic juke is the season's most ingenious device for scientifically torturing your friends.

Well, anyway, one thing everybody was wondering about some months ago has been settled: Hitler wasn't bluffing.

Mr. Hathaway

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations on your editorial in faint praise of Comrade Hathaway, lately of the Daily Worker. Please permit one of his public to return the compliment.

Brilliant as the comrade undoubtedly was in his "audacity and contempt for vulgar consistency" during the Russo-Finnish episode, his achievement was pale and specter-thin compared with the dazzling feats of the capitalist press about the same time.

Do you recall these daily annihilations of "Red divisions," the nightly panic that seized the "fleeing Soviet hordes," the late-city edition trappings, and freezings of whole battalions?

And, by the way, whatever happened to the Finnish relief campaign? It doesn't make the front page any more.

Military Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The adoption of compulsory military service would add to the staggering tax burden of the United States; conscription would mean the diversion of vital expenditures needed for domestic reform; conscription would lower the American standard of living for decades, perhaps forever; conscription means an unending armaments race that can have but two end results, war or the greatest depression America has ever known; and conscription means the triumph of the Nazi ideal that the individual exists solely for his service to the state. If we want to destroy our country, the America we love, then the quickest way it can be accomplished is the passage of a compulsory military service bill.

NICHOLAS O. BROUGHTON.

Defense Program

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The psychological kinks of some of our American conservatives would be, I think, quite as intriguing to the impartial scientist as those of Herr Hitler himself. Recent fulminations by Mr. Walter Lippmann are a case in point. The Government is trying to carry out a defense program. Executives of steel, oil and related industries are holding out for prices and taxes that will give them a guaranteed profit no matter what happens. Does Mr. Lippmann charge them with lack of patriotism because of the delay they are causing? Not at all. It is the "politicians and bureaucrats" who are to blame because they will not give in to these executives.

If workers in a defense industry ask for wages commensurate with rising living costs, they are immediately shouted down as "unpatriotic," but owners of capital in these same industries can strike as long as they want to and all the blame will be heaped upon those honest public officials who are merely trying to prevent a raid on the Federal treasury like that of 1917-18.

I say that those who have capital utilizable for national defense should put it to work immediately and if they will not do so, then the Government should conscript that capital for the duration of the emergency. When we can guarantee a living wage to the soldier in the ranks, it will be time to guarantee the profits of financiers and industrialists. C. A. F.

From '21 To 31'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am one of the thousands of men between the ages of 21 and 31. I expect to be called up for the compulsory military training if the bill is passed in Congress.

I don't want to go.

I am in college; I have one more year ahead of me before I am graduated. I have a part-time job on a newspaper and am helping to pay my expenses while I'm in school. My job isn't necessary for the national defense, so I can't depend on that to keep me from going to camp. I have no dependents. I believe that I am mentally and morally capable of learning how to shoot a man in cold blood. No, perhaps that's wrong. I may not be morally capable, because I do not believe in killing a man unless it's absolutely necessary, and no one has done anything to me yet.

My reason for not wanting to go to camp is not that I believe military training would be harmful to me. Military training is all right for those who like it and want a military career, but I think that the choice between a military career and a civilian career should lie with the individual, and not with the state, as it does in so many foreign countries. I think that a man who has been born and raised in this country should be allowed to pick his career himself, and not be forced to shoulder a gun against his will.

I don't want to be a soldier. I want to be a newspaperman.

It's all very well to say that the training period would last for only a year, but how many of us will be able to return to our everyday lives after this training period is up? How many of us, after being absent for so long will be able to pick up the threads we have been forced to drop and act as if there had been no lapse of time? How many of us will be able to find a job after our training is through? I have little or no experience in anything except writing, and very little in that. When one goes job-hunting nowadays the question asked almost immediately is "Where did you go to college?" You aren't wanted unless you can produce a degree of some sort, and how can I get one if my education is brought to a standstill now, before it is completed?

It might be possible to go back to college after a year, but it isn't easy to remember all the little details that you have learned before and put them in their proper places.

Anyway, how do we know that the training period will last only a year? The conscription bill has been changed so many times now that it would not be hard after a while to lengthen the term to two years, then three, and so forth. How can we tell that the period of training will not be raised to more than it is now after we are enlisted?

My education isn't the only thing bothering me. I want to be married as soon as I am out of college. Do you think that my girl wants to wait for me while I go away to camp for a year and learn how to shoot, and then wait longer while I hunt all around this city and probably many another trying to find a job that will pay enough for our support?

I'm willing to defend my country. I have never said that I wouldn't fight for America; but I have always said, and always will say, that a man should be allowed to choose his own way of life, and my choice isn't with the armed forces of our country.

If and when the time comes to defend my country I will fight.

The time hasn't come and I don't see any reason why we who are young should be prepared for the slaughter. D. V. T.
Washington, Aug. 3.

Of Objectors

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that danger confronts the Nation, the "Conscientious Objector" must again be reckoned with.

I take no exception to the decision of a committee of Congress, charged with the task of formulating a feasible compulsory military training law in the face of assorted opposition from wishful thinkers, cowards, and pro-Germans, in providing exemption for the conscientious objector as an expediency to sidestep a religious issue; but I deprecate the muddled thinking of a publicist who defends such exemption as a matter of principle.

Among the varied duties of citizenship in a democracy, what duty is the fundamental one? Certainly it is the duty of the citizen to support even with his life the preservation of the democracy itself. Should any privilege take precedence of this duty?

How has that freedom of religious belief upon which the conscientious objector relies become part of his heritage except by the blood of men brave enough to fight for the preservation of our Bill of Rights?

Very properly, we deny the privilege of citizenship to the alien who refuses to take oath that he will fight, if called upon, for the preservation of the Nation. Why should we not apply an equivalent procedure in the case of the man born with the privilege of citizenship? JOHN R. WALKER.
Washington, July 29.

Prophecy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The relation of Russia to Germany is a very important factor in an invasion of England by Germany. The German strategists must consider the great probability of a belief by Stalin that Russia would not survive very long the destruction of England, and, in this event, even if Stalin's belief were wrong, Russia would attack Germany as soon as the latter's air force was tied up by an invasion of England. Although a confederate of Russia, Germany is threatened with a war on two fronts, as in 1914, and for this reason Germany may decide to eliminate Russia now, an idea which may account for Russia's action in Rumania and elsewhere.

In my letter of June 20, I prophesied a peace offensive rather than an invasion. The peace offensive has occurred. The invasion is still on its way, but postponed, according to the Italians who ought to know. Another prophecy is that there is as much a chance of invasion of Russia by Germany, as of England. It is just a matter of which comes first. WATSON.
Washington, August 1.

Mail From Germany

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I regularly receive mail from relatives in Germany. In a letter posted last month the writer, in addition to informing me that German newspapers may no longer be sent to me, describes the formalities Germans have to go through who wish to mail a letter to a foreign country. Simply dropping it in the nearest mailbox would be a procedure worthy only of the decadent democracies; rather, the sender now has to arm himself with his passport and march to the postoffice, where his true identity is first established, before his letter will be accepted for mailing.

After that, of course, the letter is still subjected to the now routine opening and scrutiny by the military censor, and every single page of its content arrived here marked for approval by obviously two officials.

One can draw interesting comparisons and conclusions from this bit of news. E. Q.

The Post Impressionist

The Refugee

SOMETIME last summer an editor called me and told me about the doctor. He asked me to do him a personal favor—tutor the doctor, who was a German refugee, in the English language. He said that the doctor's job depended upon his learning English soon.

He was living in a small room in one of Washington's less expensive hotels when I first called upon him. The day was unbearably muggy, and he was sitting around in his mesh undershirt, perspiring, and looking unhappy. One of the first things he said to me in the little English that he knew was, "I do not know this heat." He looked listless, as if life were too difficult for him.

The doctor, a Ph. D. in music, was a bachelor of 58. He had been the music editor of a Berlin magazine, but had been forced to resign upon Hitler's accession to power. For one year he had remained in Germany, earning his living by lecturing to cultural groups, until a letter from the Gestapo arrived, forbidding these activities. Then he sold his things and left for Zurich. Here he found work in a Swiss university. Later, disturbed by the events after Munich, he wrote to an American musicologist, who succeeded in getting him a position on the faculty of a Southern college. He had been in America only two weeks when I called upon him.

He was a tall man, who carried his portliness gracefully. Though he wore heavy bifocals, which made his eyes seem small, his face was impressive, more because of its remarkable sensitivity, than because of his even features. While working he wore a cord hairnet over his thinning gray-black hair He was still wearing his German-made clothes. The lapels of his suit were cut differently from the American styles. The odor of cologne drifted from him as he talked.

He confessed that he was unhappy because he was having difficulty learning English. "I am afraid I am too old to learn English," he said. "My tongue is too thick. It does not go quickly enough."

However, his despondency lightened when I described the methods I intended to use with him: Phonetics; speech exercises; oral reading; grammar and usage; vocabulary and composition. He looked up hopefully. "Perhaps I shall succeed," he said.

We began work next day, and I thought we had a good lesson, but when I returned on the day following, I found that I had given him too much. As we went over the previous day's work, he became tense and disturbed. He stuttered over every syllable, and his notebook shivered in his hands. I had to stop work and talk to him about other things, meanwhile trying to pique his curiosity by telling him the story of words like "sincere" and "bedlam." He would listen silently, then pronounce the words after me. We could do little more that day.

On some days our work came along better than on others. I learned not to see him in the morning, for he always did poorly then. He spoke incoherently, and his accent was thicker than ever. He said to me later, "I guess in my sleep I become entirely German; so I have difficulty in the morning expressing myself in English." After that we worked only after lunch, and his progress was better.

One day I arrived to find the doctor in a strange mood. We had begun our work, when, to my disappointment, he reverted to almost every one of his errors. As the lesson continued, he grew more and more disturbed. I could read the disappointment and shame that he felt in himself by his long pauses between words and by his half-born gestures.

I stopped and asked him what had happened. In a slow bitter way, he told me that he had had a meeting that morning with the president of the college, who had expressed himself as disappointed in the doctor's progress, and had sharply reminded him that his position depended upon his ability to speak and comprehend fluently before October 1.

"I don't know what overcame me," said the doctor. "I had words to speak, but it was morning, and I was nervious——"

"Nervous," I corrected.

"I was nervious," he repeated, "and I began to stutter like a schoolboy."

His eyes were filled with misery. "It was terrible," he said.

I persuaded the doctor to spend the rest of the afternoon walking with me in Rock Creek Park.

But in a week he had regained his confidence and was doing well again. He prepared his written work carefully, and he practiced his speech exercises with diligence. It was almost pathetic to see him standing before a mirror, training his tongue to touch his upper palate by repeating over and over, "Nah-nah, dah-dah, tah-tah."

I felt complete confidence in him, but he confessed to a feeling of uneasiness.

On the first of October the trustees arranged an afternoon tea in his honor, at which time he was to address a gathering of about 100 distinguished guests. I accompanied him, to hear the speech which we had been rehearsing.

After the introductions had been made, the doctor was escorted to a small podium. He stepped up, looked in the direction of the president and his wife, who were sitting on the side of the room, bowed stiffly, and took out his notes.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I am very happy to address my American listeners for the first time."

Suddenly he paused, and I could see his face redden. He glanced quickly at the president and then at the guests, who were waiting in silence for him to go on. I looked at the doctor anxiously, as he referred to his notes. Then, deliberately, he began again:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am very happy to address my American auditors for the first time." His shoulders straightened. He was smiling happily. Then the sentences began to flow.

Turkish Excursion

By Hans Haas

With The Trojan Horse In Troy

THE "TROJAN HORSE", thanks to Herr Hitler's methods of conquest, has become a household word, and the historic strategem which made it famous now has its streamlined counterpart.

During the time I stayed in Turkey I happened to see such a Trojan Horse in action; it was, strangely enough, at the actual scene of his wooden ancestor's exploits—at the ruins of ancient Troy.

It was on a Sunday in June, 1939, that the "Kinali", a small Turkish coastal vessel, brought our party of 26 across the Marmara Sea to the rocky shores of what 3,000 years ago was Troy. The land of Paris and Helena today is part of the fortified zone of the Dardanelles and, of course, access to this region is strictly forbidden.

The German "Ausflugsverein" (excursion club) in Istanbul, however, had been able to secure special permission from the "Besinci Sube" (this is the "fifth division", a widely feared political department of the Turkish secret police) and our party, led by a professor of history in the German high school at Istanbul, was allowed to explore the ruins of the old city. We were, however, accompanied by two detectives of the fifth division.

During the lengthy voyage nothing particular attracted my attention. We landed shortly before noon and crossed the stony strip of beach that lies in front of the great hill which once was crowned by the walled city. Ascending the dirt road we reached the few ruins left, unearthed years ago by Schliemann and others. The professor told his story as we strolled through the ruined streets filled with weeds, dust, scorpions, and snakes. Later in the afternoon we went back to our ship.

When we arrived at the top of the hill, I had noticed that four pepole were missing from our party. Two of them were the detectives who had come along to guard Turkey's most important military secrets. I mentioned their absence to the professor, who looked at me with a rather strange expression in his eyes, but said dryly: "Don't you bother, they'll be back."

I FOUND THEM later on, comfortably seated in the "kahvehane" (coffee shop) in the small village near the harbor, gayly consuming one "raki," the native liquor, after another.

Several days later things looked different to me when someone told me that the "Ausflugsverein" was the official title in Turkey of Herr Bohle's fifth column oranization there; Herr Bohle was and still is the leader of the German "Auslandsorganization" (Foreign Political Organization). This agency has in all countries "Ortsgruppen" (local branches), which do the official job, and "Hilfsvereine" (auxiliary associations) which do everything that the service cannot achieve openly and officially. The "Auslandsorganization" had about 50,000 members abroad (the Western Hemisphere not included), and Herr Bohle had repeatedly announced that every German abroad is bound to participate in this service if asked to do so, on pain of immediate loss of German citizenship in case of refusal.

Our excursion club was such a "Hilfsverein" and to it had been assigned the job of obtaining information about the fortifications in the Dardanelles area. During the 12 hours that we were there, it was able to look around the eastern part of the military zone unmolested by the detectives sent along to watch us.

I MADE THE ACQUAINTANCE of a young Austrian girl, who was working in the Istanbul branch of the Krupp steel factories. From her, and later from others who were "in the know" but were careful to talk guardedly, I learned that the German fifth column in Turkey was assigned the task of spreading rumors intended to stir up suspicion in Turkish intellectual circles concerning Turkey's allies.

As a matter of fact, popular sentiment in Turkey in the last two years had been almost unanimously anti-German and the pact with the western democracies seemed only a natural climax of a desirable and concerted development. That, in the meantime, the pact had proved to be a failure and that Turkey preferred to deceive her allies, was mainly the result of these events which I had the chance to observe and which were aimed at and caused by Herr Bohle's policies and helpers.

One of the devices used by the "Auslandsorganization" was to stid up unrest and suspicion between Russia and Turkey. Russia, to this end, was asked by Germany to assume some kind of hostile attitude toward Turkey, and as a reward for this assistance the German secret service delivered strategic plans and information concerning objects of particular interest to Russia, as the fortifications around the Straits. My informants, as it turned out later, knew what they were talking about.

Turkish officials were doing nothing to stop the activities of these Fifth Columnists. In fact, they actually knew very little about them. During the fall of 1939, however, the Turkish newspaper Tan, in Istanbul, went out to "capture the Trojan horse," in a sense—and was successful.

"Tan" means "sunrise" in Turkish, a nice name for a newspaper in any language. Bad tongues in Istanbul used to say that the paper had its name because the staff slept through every sunrise.

ONE MORNING in November, however, one of the Tan reporters did not sleep at all. He spent some time hanging around the German Embassy, talked with some acquaintances there and, afterward, inspected the editorial offices of the Turkische Post, the official German newspaper in Turkey. He later flatly denied that this inspection took place "upon invitation," but apparently also in Turkey the end justifies the means. The results of his work that early morning were printed next day in the Tan, and the repercussions were far reaching.

The story is short and simple. On October 31, in Moscow, on occasion of the annuual celebration there, Russia's Mr. Molotoff had delivered a well prepared speech, very unfriendly to Turkey. The Turkish censor (officially, there is no censor in Turkey) had issued a condensed copy of that speech, forgetting to mention anything that would offend the Turkish public.

The German Ortsgruppe in Istanbul had obtained a copy of the speech in its original form; they translated it into Turkish, printed it in leaflet form and distributed it secretly. The young Turkish reporter got a copy, as he puts it, "from a friend in the print shop." Through some unaccountable "oversight" the law that every publication in Turkey must be submitted first to the municipality (read fifth division of the political police) had not been compiled with.

Tan devoted three colmuns of its first page to the incident, calling names and insisting that this affair was but one link in an insidious German chain of bribery of Turkish officials and divers other Fifth Column activities. It named Herr Brell, the German consulate's press agent; it charged that the majordomo of the German Embassy had helped distribute these leaflets among businessmen and private individuals. It named Otto Lachs and Erich Meyer as suspects of these and related activities. One week later, the latter two gentlemen together with six others (all members of the "Ausflugsverein" and my companions on the trip to Troy) were in jail. The director of the "Besinci Sube" in Istanbul and some of his assistants were suddenly dismissed and several resignations among other officials surprised the public.

During the next weeks, while the eight fellows stayed behind the walls of the old, uncomfortable prison just back of the famous Agya Sofya, many things happened behind the political scenes.

Herr von Papen, then German Ambassador to Turkey, had been in Bucharest and, in greatest secrecy, had suggested to King Carol of Rumania that Germany would build a strong fortification line against a possible threat to Rumania from Russia, if Rumania would yield her whole economc resources to the Reich. Tan—nobody knows how—learned of this plan and published the story, so that the German mission there failed.

When Herr von Papen came back to Ankara, he was informed at once of the sad case of the eight explorers, who were still in jail. He saw several important people in Ankara, requested, threatened, and raged—but all in vain. The eight were deported without having seen the courts. The Turkish government, however, sent a polite note to Herr von Ribbentrop in which there was no doubt left that the Turks would welcome the news that Germany had found some other post for Herr von Papen—and it was indicated politely that, the sooner he was recalled, the better. This, by the way, was the fourth and equally unsuccessful attempt of the Turks to get rid of the German envoy.

Shortly thereafter the chairman of the Deutsche Bank in Istanbul (which handles practically all of the German-Turkish trade) walked into Tan's office and asked for the editor. After preliminary compliments from both sides the banker hinted that his group would be glad to buy the Tan (which was not too flourishing then). Mr. Ziya politely offered his guest some more Turkish coffee, hastened to inform him that the paper was not for sale at any price.

This was the last attempt to do away with the anti-Fifth-Column campaign of the Tan, and, incidentally, a short time thereafter order came from Berlin that all Germans had to leave Turkey. As history has proved, however, the retreat was more or less a strategic one; the activities of the various agents and groups had well prepared the terrain before. That, later in 1940, Turkey yielded to Russian and German pressure and abandoned her former allies when Italy entered the war, gave full evidence of the successful policy conducted by Herr Bohle and his emissaries. But it was that young reporter who helped us to understand why and how all this happened, and history should be grateful to him who did not sleep that early morning in November.

Fair Enough

Idea For Willkie

I DON'T KNOW why I am always giving away, free, the marvelous thoughts which grow in such profusion in my wonderful brain, but suppose we just put it down to my generous Italian nature and proceed to this day's love-gift, which is offered to Mr. Wendell Willkie, a man I have met but once—and that time only barely.

In view of the insinuations which have been tossed around concerning Mr. Willkie's service on the side of wealth, and the suggestion that he must, therefore, himself be a money lover, I propose that right now Mr. Willkie draw up a schedule of every dollar's worth of property and every cent of money that he owns, down to the rustiest curly-handled mashie in his golf bag, and the change in his pants and require every member of his family to do the same, and file these documents in some public record or tack them on the courthouse door of his old home town.

I propose that he promise that if he is elected he will require every member of his cabinet to do the same and that he state publicly that he and every member of his family over whom he has any control and the Cabinet members and their families will not exploit public office, directly or indirectly, for private profit beyond the salaries provided by law.

NOT BEING a lawyer, I will just skip the and/ors and the legalistic bullet-proofing and concentrate on the intent of this proposal, which is that Mr. Willkie should throw everything on the blanket for a public counting before election and guarantee to do the same again at the end of his term, if any, and promise that he will not quit office with a dollar more than he had when he went in, except such amounts as he can prove to have been saved out of his salary.

No writing for magazines or syndicates, for high prices by relatives as yet untouched by literary genius, no sales indorsements or radio performances for pay, no insurance business between members of his family and interests which are subject to whimsical interpretations of laws or codes by Government bureaus and no $100,000 mock jobs for any cousins or aunts with any liquor, movie or shipping interests, under penalty of public repudiation of such cousins or aunts which would destroy the only possible motive for their employment in such jobs.

MR. WILLKIE, being a lawyer, can dress up this idea so that it can stand inspection and expand it to include other members of the national Administration, even to the degree of precluding the employment of ne'er-do-well brothers-in-law of important officials in $4,800-$6,000 jobs, counting paper clips or keeping scrapbooks. He should cover it with a statement of the general principle that public officials have a moral obligation not to enrich themselves on the side or permit relatives over whom they have control to exploit their relationship for profit.

To be sure, this would be in the nature of a dig at the Roosevelt family, but, after all, they have been asking for it—all except young Franklin and Johnny—but it would also honk a noble note addressed to such public servants as Ed Kelly and Frank Hague, and, in a wider sense, to the morals of all the people.

THE INSINUATIONS that because Willkie has served big corporations he probably will peel the gilt off the Capitol dome and carry off a trunkload of samples from the thousand-dollar-bill department of the Treasury, give him an excellent invitation to declare himself on the subject of private gain and the exploitation of office by the relatives of public men and a fine opportunity to state the proposition that respectable public servants don't get rich beyond their official pay.

If anyone gets a split lip that won't be the fault of Mr. Willkie, but of the victim, who should not be in the way of his swing. There are many public officials, as we all know, who carry on profitable private dealings with Government or sub-Government agencies through relatives, and Mr. Willkie, with his knack for that kind of saying, should be able to round up this practice, too, in the scope of his condemnation.

Ideas like this may sound easy, but you have no idea of the strain.

NORMAN THOMAS

Ernest Lindley writes that "when the Socialist candidate for President prefers a larger standing army of hired professionals to a citizen army, in which the liability to serve falls equally on all, the world is topsy-turvy"

Just Poppycock?

By Ernest K. Lindley

Conscription And Democracy

SENATOR NYE says that conscription in peacetime is "an insult to every American and a move to shanghai American youth into totalitarianism and militarism." To him "the only emergency in this country is the one conjured up by those who want to send our boys to Europe and Asia."

Senator Holt says: "Show me a dictatorship, and I'll show you conscription." To him, warnings that Germany might attempt to invade the United States are "just plain poppycock."

Senator Wheeler speaks in scarcely less restrained language. He is not worried about Hitler and Japan.

Norman Thomas, a Socialist, denounces compulsory military service and assails the War Department for not using more imagination in attracting volunteers. This is strange doctrine for a professed exponent of Socialism, a doctrine rooted in the belief in equal rights and equal obligations. Hire somebody else to do it! A thoroughly plutocratic doctrine. When the Socialist candidate for President prefers a larger standing army of hired professionals to a citizen army, in which the liability to serve falls equally on all, the world is topsy-turvy.

Senator Holt need not detain us.

SENATOR NYE has accomplished several highly useful things in his public life. Senator Wheeler has accomplished many in his. But, like Senator Holt, they seem to feel:

1. That conscription means totalitarianism and dictatorship.

2. That there is no emergency requiring special military preparation.

Conscription is not, and never has been, peculiar to dictatorships or to monarchies, or to democracies. Compulsory military service has been the usual thing in democracies with land frontiers. France, as a democracy; Italy, as a democracy; Sweden, Belgium, Switzerland, Czecho-Slovakia—not to mention numerous other nations bordering on or aspiring to democratic forms of government—have or had compulsory military service.

During the last 70 years the only important democracies without compulsory military service in peacetime have been the United States and Great Britain and her dominions. The reason they have not had regular systems of compulsory military service in peacetime is not related to their form of government. It is because they have not felt it necessary to have large armies ready to go into action on short notice. If they had felt the need of large, immediately available armies they, like other democratic nations, certainly would have resorted to compulsory service in some form. For, rooted deep in the Anglo-Saxon tradition of freedom is fear of a large professional army—as distinguished from a citizen army—and recognition of the obligation of every ablebodied man to defend the nation, an obligation which he can no longer execute without training.

AT BOTTOM there has been one reason, and only one reason, why the United States, Great Britain and the British Commonwealths—in contrast to other democracies—have not had regular peacetime compulsory military service. That is because they believed that they were protected by sea power from the attacks of the nations with strong armies. They relied upon their navies, if not for complete protection, at least to give them time to train large armies when they might be needed.

In 1917, we went to war in Europe. Whether we went to war for good and sufficient reasons is beside this point. The point is that the French and British armies and British sea power gave us time to raise and train an army. Between our declaration of war and the first action by American troops 13½ months elapsed. Eighteen months after we had declared war, inadequately trained troops were ordered into the Argonne offensive. The choice seemed to be between using them, insufficiently prepared as many of them were, and permitting the war to extend into the year 1919. Although the Germans were on their last legs, our casualties were much heavier than would have been suffered by better trained troops.

AS THE PRESIDENT has underlined, it is doubtful whether ever again in our history we will have from a year to 18 months to prepare ourselves for war—even in self-defense in the Western Hemisphere. If we had now a two-ocean navy and a great air force, we might not need to hurry the training of a larger army. But we will not have a two-ocean navy until 1945 or 1946. We will not have a large air force until the middle of 1942—and an air force alone cannot defend us.

The present objective of the Army is to train and equip an army of 1,200,000 men. On top of the Regular Army and National Guard, this will require drawing 700,000 or more men into the Army during the next eight months—probably 400,000 in October and 400,000 late next winter. This is the size of the army which the experts consider necessary to defend the Western Hemisphere.

In mobilizing, training and equipping this army, every day may be of vital importance. Senators Holt, Nye and Wheeler seem to be confident that Hitler, the Japs and Mussolini have no designs inimical to us. But I'd hate to stake the fate of the Nation on their judgment. Maybe they have tapped the same confidential sources of information which led Senator Borah to assert last summer that there would be no war in Europe during 1939.

Chevy Chase Youth To Run D.C. Willkie Offices Today

Boys and girls of Chevy Chase, who want Willkie for President and have raised a fund of about $100 for the campaign chest, will take over the Willkie Washington Committee headquarters here entirely today.

The headquarters are at 727 Fifteenth street northwest, and will be turned over to 14-year-old Leonard Williams, president of the Chevy Chase Boys and Girls Club and his chums, for the day. it was announced by Roger Robb, membership committee spokesman of the headquarters.

Young Williams will be assisted by members of his own club and two other Willkie clubs he initiated in Chevy Chase. Beginning at 11 a. m., the morning session will be devoted by Williams to showing the boys and girls how the adult clubs operate the campaign.

Walter Johnson, Republican Congressional candidate in Maryland, will attend.

Heat Wave Story

"Bowzell!" called the city editor sharply. Bowzell, star reporter, rewrite and utility man, had finished a murder story an hour before and was now on the phone taking the details of a labor riot, a wedding and two traffic accidents.

He looked wilted.

"Bowzell!" repeated the city editor impatiently.

"Yezzir," responded the reporter.

"You're not doing anything just now," said the city editor. "Get a weather story! Heat wave reaches new height! . . . Hundreds prostrated! . . . Thousands flee to beaches! . . . No relief in sight! . . . All that sort of thing."

"But I'm working on . . ."

"Drop it! . . . We're making a spread on the heat."

Bowzell opened his shirt another couple of buttons and mopped his brow with a blotter.

"Touseley is in booth two with a hundreds-sleep-in-park yarn. Benson is in booth three with a record-exodus-to-beaches story," said the city editor. "Make it snappy!" ordered the C. E.

(The curtain will be lowered to denote a lapse of five minutes.)

"Bowzell!"

"Yezzir," responded the reporter, now pulling off his shirt and throwing a cup of ice water in his own face.

"Take a story on the desk phone from Tooper . . . Bus Driver Overcome by Heat Sidewipes Street Car! . . . See if we've got a picture of George T. Kidzbaum! . . . He just fell off his yacht while trying to find a breeze . . . We've got only about four minutes."

Bowzell wet a sponge and tied it to the back of his neck. He got a little mixed up and wrote that Kidzbaum was in Bellevue and that the bus driver had fallen off the yacht. But he was doing his best with the thermometer still rising.

"Bowzell!"

"Yezzir."

"Weather bureau on the wire! New heat wave sweeping on from Chicago . . . Get hourly temperature up to 2 p. m."

"But it's only 11 a. m."

"Are you a reporter or are you a reporter?" demanded the city editor. "And get a yarn on the railroad situation . . . I understand there's a record exodus . . . Don't forget the East Side Families Sleep on Fire Escape angle . . . Are you nearly done!"

Bowzell took off his trousers and one shoe. He felt pretty queer now.

"Oh, say, Bowzell!"

"Yezzir."

"There's a horse overcome by heat in front of the office. Run out and see about it."

"Huh?" gasped Bowzell, picking off the other shoe.

"There's a horse overcome by heat outside the office," repeated the city editor.

"Never mind the horse overcome by heat OUTSIDE the office," gasped Bowzell, slowly collapsing. "There's one overcome INSIDE now!"

As The Clock Ticks

By Barnet Nover

Defense And The Time Factor

BECAUSE the danger to the security of the Americas from overseas aggression is potential rather than actual, prospective rather than immediate, there are those who take a complacent view of our defense situation.

Why, they argue, anticipate the worst? Why prepare for a possibility that may not occur? Why upset accustomed habits, abandon old comforts and conveniences, to meet a situation which has not yet arisen and may never arise?

That was the way a great many Norwegians, Danes, Netherlanders and Belgians felt before the Nazi steamroller suddenly rode roughshod over their peaceful lands. That was the way a great many Frenchmen reacted behind the seemingly impregnable barrier of the Maginot Line. That was, for so tragically long a time, the attitude of the British government and of a large portion of the British people.

They all know now that they had been living in a fool's paradise. Had they the opportunity to live these last years over again they would, no doubt, order things differently. It is too late now. The sands have run out.

ACTUALLY, of course, we have made every mistake of judgment which the peoples of the European democracies have made. Like the Norwegians, Dutch and Belgians we have assumed that it was enough to want peace to have it. Like the French we have placed our trust in a Maginot Line, only ours was three thousand miles of blue water rather than several hundred miles of steel and concrete. Like the British we have never fully understood the meaning for our security of a balance of power system in Europe which kept any one nation from becoming master of the entire continent.

It is quite true that we were jolted out of our complacence by Hitler's blitzkrieg in the Netherlands and Belgium, by the German break-through at Sedan, by the disasters suffered by the French armies in the Battle of France.

The reaction in this country to that terrifying succession of events was immediate and drastic. We decided to embark on a defense program on a scale never before dreamed of in peacetime. A Congress which had previously shown a disposition to pinch pennies began to appropriate sums by the billions. We began to realize that the cause of the Allies was our cause; that in attempting to stem the Nazi tide from sweeping over Europe they were, at the same time, also preventing it from reaching our shores. The demand to give Great Britain and France all possible aid short of war rose to great heights. And some action in line with that desire began to be taken.

THEN FRANCE collapsed and Britain was left all alone to fight Hitler.

Our reaction to subsequent developments has been strange and curious. With France's capitulation it was immediately assumed in some quarters that the doom of Britain was only a matter of days. The menace to this hemisphere loomed closer than ever. But instead of postponing the evil day as long as possible by furnishing Britain with everything we could spare in the way of planes and arms and destroyers we began to retreat from our sudden plunge into realism.

It began to be said that we needed all these arms for ourselves. In other words, there was little we could do to help the British, all that was left was to hurry our own defenses and prepare for the worst. Yet, if the discussion on the Burke-Wadsworth bill is any criterion we are not ready to do that either. Some would whittle down that measure to a mere shadow of its original self; others would postpone its operation, even to limited fashion, until after the Nation had tried voluntary recruiting; still others want no hair or hide of anything savoring of conscription.

NOW EITHER the crisis is real or it isn't real. Either we are in danger or we are not. If the crisis is not real and we are not in any actual or potential danger then we are wasting a terrific amount of money in rearmament, money that might well be saved. If, however, the crisis is such as to warrant our spending seven or eight times as much on armaments during the coming year as we ever have spent for that purpose in any other year in peacetime then, obviously, there is every reason why we should begin and begin at once building up an Army, Navy and an air force far beyond anything we have ever seen in this country in the past, why we should resort to conscription rather than depend on a voluntary system of recruiting.

There is no logic in being, at one and the same time, as certain members of Congress appear to be, in favor of wholesale appropriations for defense while opposed to selective service on a large scale.

The point, of course, is that the danger which we are facing is not yet upon us. But for this we have not ourselves but the British to thank. They refused to surrender to Hitler; they show every determination to fight on. And after six weeks they appear to be better prepared against invasion than ever before. They have bought time for themselves, and in doing so have vouchsafed us time, too.

It may be that they will hold out indefinitely and even, in the long run, triumph. If they do, that would solve a lot of our defense problems. But we cannot for one moment afford to assume anything of the sort. We can only assume that they will fight on as long as possible, better with our aid, as well as they can without it. And we must also assume that if the British go under our position will be far worse than it is today, all the more so because when we had time to prepare we wasted it.

Washingtonians come and Washingtonians go, but Legislators here are beginning to fear they're doomed to stay on forever. With no immediate prospects of adjournment for the present session of Congress, most of them have given up the prospect of seeing the home town before winter sets in. Some of them slip out of town during weekends to visit friends or resorts. Others get a breath of relaxation by having friends from home visit them with all the latest news.

Senator Hattie W. Caraway finds that life these days is "just a treadmill from the office to home and back again—" and is sticking pretty close to the job. From time to time she has small informal parties at her home on Colorado avenue, and lately she has had several guests from the home State of Arkansas.

Last week Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Parr, of Jonesboro, visited the Senator for several days, and previous to that Miss Emma Riley, of Little Rock, was a house guest for two weeks. The Senator's son and daughter-in-law, Capt. and Mrs. Paul W. Caraway, were down a few weeks ago for a brief vacation from their home at West Point, where Capt. Caraway is on duty. Senator Caraway still hopes to get away some time this year for a visit to her home in Jonesboro, but has ceased to count on it seriously.

Sisters Stay Here With Senator Guffey

Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, is, of course, in town and two of his sisters, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, have elected to remain here with him. Their other sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Miller, are spending the season at their summer home, Wolf Creek Farm, in Slippery Rock, Pa. The Senator and Misses Guffey visit them from time to time on week-ends, but are otherwise leading a very quiet existence, the heat here having discouraged them from even trying to entertain.

Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wife of the Senator from Michigan, has left for a bit of rest after the strenuousness of the recent Republican convention. She left about ten days ago for the Kudner Ranch, in Carrazoza, N. Mex., and will return in a few weeks.

Senator and Mrs. Barkley Tour Countryside

Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, are another couple staying as quiet and cool as is possible in Washington these days. With no house guests and no parties on the schedule they confine their activities to quiet drives through the countryside during the week-ends.

And so, on and through the list. Those who can, hie themselves hence, while Congres pays the penalty of politics and fame.

Washington Full of Distinguished Foreigners on Way to Far Lands

WASHINGTON THESE DAYS can compete with Lisbon for the title, "cross-roads of the civilized world"—or what's left of it. Foreigners come and go en route to far-off places in the labyrinthine game called travel, or "get to your destination."

Lunching at the Shoreham the other day with Jacques Truelle, Counselor of the French Embassy, was a Frenchman who was going to take up a post in Egypt. He is Georges Picot, a man of resource and imagination, as proven by the fact that he has decided to go to Egypt via China. He thinks it the surest way to "get to his destination."

Also at luncheon that day was Paul Leroy-Beaulieu, Financial Attache of the French Embassy, who has his headquarters in New York but who visits Washington regularly. He is on his way to France, having been summoned by the Petain government to take the post of director of trade agreements at the foreign office in Vichy. M. Leroy-Beaulieu will go by Clipper.

ANOTHER OF M. Truelle's guests, Andre Geraud, better known as the political writer, Pertinax, was a traveler on the Washington-Vichy route, but in the opposite direction. He has just arrived in a hurry from the Vichy government, which has peevishly announced that all his property is confiscated.

Conversation turned on the similar plight of newswriter, Genevieve Tabouis, who is expected shortly in Washington from New York. This clever woman had become almost an oracle with her, unfortunately, true predictions of political events in Europe.

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Belech and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann completed M. Truelle's luncheon party.

Latest report from the Zuberbuhlers is that they will stay in Miami for a few days on their way ot Washington from Havana, and will fly to the Capital on the seventh to see Senora de Zuberbuhler's father, George Garrett. They will go on to New York to say good-by to Dr. Leopoldo Melo, Argentina's head of delegation to the Havana conference, and Senora de Melo. In New York the Zuberbuhlers will await the arrival of Senora de Zuberbuhler's mother, Mrs. George Gordon, and Mr. Gordon. Mr. Gordon is United States Minister to the Netherlands.

MARGOT GARRETT ZUBERBUHLER seems to commute between Buenos Aires and Washington since she and Mariano went to live in Argentina.

On their recent flight from Buenos Aires to Havana their Pan-American Airways pilot decided, because of strong headwinds, to stop for the night at the company's emergency station at Cayenne, the French penal settlement. The hotel where the airplane passengers spent the night was entirely staffed with trusties from the penal colony—they choose murderers to staff the hotel because murderers don't steal. Devil's Island was plainly visible from the beach and the laborers at Pan-American's landing field were all trusties.

Senora de Zuberbuhler kept a diary of the trip and the entry about her unexpected visit at the penal colony is so interesting and so well written that friends have been urging her to publish it.

R. C. Albrights On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Albright, who are now on their wedding trip in New England, will be at home after September 1 at 209 Glenwood road, Bethesda, Md.

The former Miss Irma Mary Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry James Smith, of 3906 Legation street, and Mr. Albright, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Albright, were married quietly on Saturday morning at 10 at the Church of Our Savior. The Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills officiated.

The bride was gowned in a suit of rose sheer, with matching hat and accessories and wore a corsage of orchids. Miss Louise Albright, sister of the bridegroom, was her maid of honor and only attendant. She wore an orchid sheer redingote with matching accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Washington Post, was the best man. Immediately following the ceremony, which was attended only by members of the wedding party, there was a small wedding breakfast at the Washington Hotel roof garden.

The bride was graduated from the Wilson Normal Teachers College and is a teacher in the Washington schools. Mr. Albright is a member of the editorial staff of The Washington Post.

Notables Enjoy Drama of Jury

The midsummer game of "Who's Who" on the jury in the courtroom drama, "The Night of January 16th," will begin again Tuesday, when the Willard Roof Players start their three midweek performances atop the Hotel Willard, where cooling breezes, and liquid refreshment, offer nightly surcease from the city heat. Tiny Meeker and his Music Makers play until after 1 o'clock in the Roof Tavern Club adjoining the "courtroom," which in the social season becomes the Willard ballroom again.

Last week's jurymen and jurywomen included some celebrated men and women of the Capital City, and this week's juries will no doubt comprise even a greater number. The audience speculates interestedly on who will be next on the list read out by the clerk of the court, at the beginning of the play. Only numbers, not names, are called, but the response to date has been 99 per cent.

Among last week's jurors were Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Representative Fred J. Douglas, Judge George D. Nielson, District Attorney Edward M. Curran, Bruce MacNamee, Raymond T. Cahill, Godfrey L. Munter, Franklin W. Hill, jr., Walter M. Bastian, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Edelblut, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Walker, Dr. M. M. McLean, George H. O'Connor, jr., Mrs. John D. Marsh and Miss Mary Burke.

On Thursday night, the Early Birds Breakfast Club, of which Dr. W. Marion Falls is president, attended the play; and other prominent groups are planning a number of jury parties this week. The Washington Players will attend the play on Wednesday night, in honor of their members who are likewise members of the Willard Roof Players.

Virginia and Maryland Horse Fanciers Flock to Saratoga for Race Opening

AT SARATOGA SPRINGS, over the week-end, were many people from Virginia and Maryland, enjoying the races and yearling sales that started Friday night. The restaurants have all opened, offering some good floor shows, but the usual gambling in the night clubs has been stopped, although many are hoping that it will begin again next week. Numbers of people express themselves as liking the pari-mutuel betting this season, although the old Saratogians have not taken to that form of wagering yet.

THOSE SEEN in the bright, flower-edged boxes of the clubhouse watching the races or looking the horses over in the paddock and at the sales stables included Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, jr., of Maryland, and their house guest, Miss Eleanor Young, of New York and Newport; Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, of Upperville, Va., and Long Island, and her trainer, Hugh Fontaine, of Upperville, and Mrs. Fontaine.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER GOODWIN, of Hartford, Conn., formerly of Goodstone, Middleburg; Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Jones, their son, Billy, and Woods Garth, of Charlottesville; William F. Hitt, Dr. Robert Humphrey, Mr. and Mrs. Colin MacLeod, Colin MacLeod, jr., and Mike Kerr, of Middleburg; Mrs. John Anderson, of Marshall; Kenneth Gilpin and his son, Tyson Gilpin, and Abram S. Hewitt, of Boyce; William H. Lipscomb, Miss Helen Lipscomb, Ross Lipscomb and Miss Louise Gade, of Leesburg; Dion Kerr, of Warrenton; T. Beatty Brown and Charles V. B. Cushman, of Upperville; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Riddle and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jeffords, of Maryland.

Mrs. Silas B. Mason, of Lexington, Ky., was there and Mrs. Ogden Phipps, of Wheatley Stables; also Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright, of Calumet Farm, Ky.; E. R. Bradley, William Woodward, Leland Sterry, jr., Bob Smith, well known trainer; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dykeman, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Gaines Gwathmey, of Long Island—she was formerly Miss Edith Wallach, of Warrenton, Va.—and Mr. and Mrs. Seth Morton, who have a summer home at the Spa and who entertain extensively during the season.

Another notable was George Bull, of New York, president of the Saratoga Racing Association, who entertains at continual house parties during August, in three large houses. More prominent sportsmen and horsemen than one will see together anywhere else in America are coming and going daily to and from this delightful and lovely spot.

Miss Margaret Byrd, of Winchester, was the luncheon guest of Mrs. Frank C. Littleton, jr., of Middleburg, the past week, before leaving Friday for Maine, accompanied by her father, Thomas Bolling Byrd, and her grandmother, Mrs. Richard E. Byrd. Miss Byrd and her father are at York Harbor, Me., for several weeks, where they joined Mrs. Thomas Bolling Byrd and her two children, Miss Lucy Mitchell and Billy Mitchell, jr.

MRS. RICHARD E. BYRD is visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Admiral and Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, at Wickup, Me. They will all return to Virginia in time to attend Senator Harry F. Byrd's annual picnic for the apple growers, at his orchards, near Berryville, later in the season.

Mrs. H. D. Flood, her son, Bolling Flood, of Washington, and Robert Portner, of New York, went to Winchester to see the Byrds before their departure for the North. Miss Margaret Byrd, who accomplishes more than three other people would undertake, entertained at a luncheon party the day before she left at her home in Winchester, in honor of Miss Virginia Mosely, of Bowling Green, Ky., who is visiting Miss Louise Moore, in Winchester.

MISS MOSELY was guest of honor a few evenings ago at a supper party given by Miss Moore. Among the guests were Misses Bobbie Conrad, Dorothy Moore, Elizabeth Massie and Messrs. Beverley Byrd, Dick Byrd, Paul Thomson, William Bell, Lewis Allen and Howard Allen.

Miss Mary Lord Andrews, of Alexandria, was the recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Brad Beverley, in Winchester. Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin and their two daughters, Misses Nancy Iselin and Barbara Iselin, and their son, "Ollie" Iselin, jr., of Middleburg, have left for Northeast Harbor, Me., where they will spend the month of August.

MRS. JOHN YOHO and her son, Peter Manning Wells, jr., of Pensacola, Fla., are visiting her mother, Mrs. William Washington, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Strother, at their home, near Delaplane. Mrs. Yoho was formerly Miss Mary Washington of Middleburg and Warrenton. She will join her husband, Lieut. Yoho, stationed at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, next Girl Says Her Employer Prefers Her to His Wife And Children; They Plan to Wed, but Her Friends Say She Would Be 'Doing Wrong;' Would She?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Because you have modern ideas on all human relationships, I want you to tell me whether I would be doing wrong in marrying my employer—who prefers me to his wife and children. I did not voluntarily break up their home, and while the children are at present somewhat estranged from their father and championing their mother, I think they will develop a more unbiased attitude as they grow older. They are quite young yet.

I have nothing against the wife. I think she is a fine little homemaker, but I feel there is something wrong with a woman who can't hold her husband. I expect to hold mine. Some of my friends say I have no right to marry this man, but if he wants me to, why not? After all, we only live once, and if they are breaking up their home, and we two (the man and I) want to marry each other, what's wrong with that? MISS MODERN.

DEAR MISS MODERN: Since divorce and remarriage are sanctioned by law—which, theoretically, establishes and protects the basic social rights of mankind—I suppose it cannot be said that you would be doing anything technically "wrong" in taking this man as your husband, if and when opportunity to do so presents itself.

One can only assume that your friends are of the opinion that substantial and enduring happiness cannot be found through breaking moral law; and that they believe, further, that you would be flying in the face of moral law in usurping this woman's place in her husband's life. If they are thinking in such vein, very likely it is because they have reason to believe you are more responsible for the "break-up" of the man's home than you choose to admit. In other words, they see you as the thief of another woman's happiness; and they anticipate that punishment suited to the crime will overtake you eventually.

On the other hand, psychologists as well as philosophers incline to the view that no marriage is ever "broken up" by outsider's machinations, unless it had already begun to collapse in its central structure. Temptation to infidelity comes from within the personality, and not from outside influences, they tell us.

The most I can say is to follow the promptings of your own conscience. I believe it may be safely said that the morality of an act is largely determined by the quality or intention of that act. Andre Maurois once defined morality somewhat as follows: "To enjoy life, and to help others enjoy it, without harming anyone, this is the whole of morality." Could you, do you think, "enjoy life" with this man and help him to enjoy it, without wilfully and selfishly "harming" his present wife? It seems to me that is a question which you alone can answer. M. H.

Man Tells Dream Of Finding a Home

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Washington has a rapidly growing population and shares with New York the unenviable record of having the highest house rents in the country. As a result, there is much overcrowding, especially acute in rooming houses, which usually consist of old buildings lacking modern conveniences.

Here in Washington, whole families frequently are herded together in a single small room, while the inevitable friction between the heterogenous and constantly changing mass of humanity brought together by chance makes these rooming houses a veritable hell. Persons not accustomed to slum conditions, yet compelled by circumstances to live in such surroundings, find the experience intolerable.

The worst sufferers are retired persons subsisting on small pensions, who would like to have a place they might call home, but who cannot afford to pay the exorbitant rents demanded for small apartments or for housekeeping rooms.

The only escape from such conditions is through cooperative action. Let me explain what I mean: Houses are built, at present, by "mass construction" planning, giving would-be home owners a chance to buy a house for as little as $29.75 a month for a five-room house, or $33 a month for a six-room "mansionette." These payments cover taxes, insurance, principal and interest.

I have inspected the six-room house at River Terrace and find it could afford an ideal home for three adults—two of whom might be middle-aged women employed during the day and living, at present, in a one-room apartment. The house I saw has three separate bedrooms with large closets.

And now I come to the point: I would gladly pay a third of the upkeep costs of such a house, for the privilege of occupying the large upstairs room, leaving the remainder of the house, including the whole ground floor, entirely to the other two partners. I am confident that by publishing my letter, you will be instrumental in bringing me into contact with other conservative, reputable, middle-aged persons who would be interested in collaborating with me in the project of creating for ourselves a pleasant home.

With that idea in mind, I submit a description of myself: Although my calendar age is 65 years, I have the appearance of a man of 50, no doubt owing to the fact that I live as a vegetarian on natural foods, containing an abundance of vitamins and minerals, shunning denatured, "processed" foods, as well as stimulants and tobacco. I have many intellectual interests and a day of 100 hours would be all too short for me. I hold three university degrees—master's, bachelor's and doctor's—and yet I am a practical man, for I like to do my own cooking and laundering. Sincerely yours, F. T. W.

Such Resourcefulness Merits Indorsement

DEAR F. T. W.: This type of solicitation properly belongs in the classified columns of the newspaper. But my appreciation of the wretched-housing problem confronting the low-income groups in Washington moves me to see what can be done for you, through the cooperation of this department. For I do think your faith-inspired effort to improve your particular situation deserves that much indorsement. Inquirers, if any, will be referred to the social service agency which you have designated (in confidence) as a middle-man. M. H.

Play's the Thing, So Are Clothes With Movie Stars

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 4.—A trip around the clock will prove that Warner stars uphold their reputation for glamour and chic before and after working hours.

One of the early morning golfers is Lean Wyman, who is soon teeing off in a moss green wool dress with pleated skirt, bright red leather belt and her monogram on one breast pocket. Attached to her belt is a handy coin purse in green wool.

Luncheon, on one of her days off from work in "They Drive by Night," sees Ann Sheridan wearing her favorite simple beige outfit. Shirtmaker dress in soft silk jersey, pumps and bag are beige and a plaid taffeta hair bow in shades of green is worn cadogan style on the back of her head.

Cantaloupes Have Varied and Interesting Uses

CANTALOUPES are now plentiful and they are delicious, too. They should be used in other ways than for the proverbial breakfast fruit. One way to use them that is as flavorsome as it is delicious is a frosted melon salad. If you want to serve melon in an attractive way be sure and give the following recipe a trial.

Frosted Melon Salad

Peel one cantaloupe. Cut a slice from end and remove the seeds. Fill center of melon with 1 package of lime gelatin dessert and chill until firm. Soften 2 packages (6 ounces), of cream cheese with top milk and frost the entire outer surface of melon with the cheese. Serve in slices on lettuce leaves, with French dressing. The top of the melon may be garnished with diced fresh fruit. Sprigs of fresh mint are also an attractive garnish.

Several days ago a letter came to my desk giving an excellent suggestion for the use of melon seeds. C. F. Lance, 228 Eleventh street southwest, is a friend to the birds, and writes as follows:

"These are melon eating days. Ripe muskmelons, cantaloupes, and honey dews are with us. Each melon contains what seems like a million seeds. These seeds are usually thrown away. If dried and saved for the cold snowy winter months, they make excellent food for the hardy birds who brave the rigors of winter with us. Just a little time and a bit of effort will yield jars of rich food for the birds on days when snow on everything makes food-finding an impossibility for them. And there is the added satisfaction of converting a waste product to a good use. And the birds will be grateful."

The Fall Hat Is Designed to Fit the Pompadour

New Headgear Shows Influence Of Current Events

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

HOW American inspiration is making itself felt in design is illustrated in the early fall millinery collection created by Florence Reichman, widely known American designer. Mrs. Reichman presented her collection last week to New York stylists and several fashion authorities from Washington.

MARSHALL ADAMS

As proof that American milliners can stand on their own inspirational feet, Mrs. Reichman explained that not only do her hats revolve around current dress styles, but around current events and happenings. She showed us what she meant with a group of first fall felts which are destined for women who insist on black from head to foot after a season of insipid pastels. Said the observant Mrs. Reichman, "No millinery collection today can be independent of the new clothes. And since most women try for a perfectly assembled effect, it is necessary to take the length of a skirt, the slimness of the new silhouette and the lines of the new coiffure into consideration."

Particularly does the pompadour hair-do enter into the scheme of things. However, Mrs. Reichman cautions those with sharp features or age lines to taboo little pompadour hats. Almost any other woman can wear her hair brushed up at the sides and long in the back, but regardless of how deeply the hat covers the head behind, hair must be neat and well-groomed beneath these hats. Hair must never resemble an old-fashioned "rat" thrown on top of the head in lazy imitation of a pompadour, believes Mrs. Reichman.

All her pompadour hats were snug and built deep in the back to conform to head lines. Some had little front ruffles of lace and velvet, others were of mink, broadtail and leopard to tie in with fur trimmed fall suits. There were a number of pouffed pocket" shaped hats in sheared beaver, with the usual fabric-like manipulations of fur for which Mrs. Reichman is famous.

Here is the black felt Zombi hat created by millinery designer Florence Reichman for her fall collection. The felt has been fringed at the edges, the better to display the embroidered Cuban emblem as well as the new pompadour coiffure

Florence Reichman Uses Hemisphere Motifs in Designs

Other Types Shown

For those who can't wear the demure pompadour bonnet—and heaven forbid that the heavy-set matron adopt one with chin ribbons, etc, there are pillboxes and cleverly slanted berets which give a nice angularity to harsh features and fit in with the new sharp, pencil-thin suits and coats. Equally chic, but for younger, more daring woman, are dramatically brimmed velvets or felts, like the swashbuckling Mambi slashed felt, embroidered with a South American shield, pictured on this page.

The Latin-American inspiration shows up in almost every American designer's collection, but Mrs. Reichman's "Salue to Pan America" has borrowed silhouettes from a noted Cuban artist's cartoons. Conrado assaquers' "Pearl of the Antilles" inspired Cuban planters' wide-brimmed hats with thimble shaped crowns which somehow manage to fit the head. Colors for these dashing "first felts" are burnt coffee bean, Pino (a chartreuxy green) herb red, sunset blue and sandalwood brown, all of these, of course, taking a back seat to the inevitable black.

Proper Diet Helps to Keep Years at Bay

By Ida Jean Kain

EVERY woman seems to go through a phase when she tampers with chronology. This age retrogression hit me in my late 20's and I started cutting down a year or so—hardly enough to make any difference! But my young sister put an end to that by remarking in an amplified tone of voice, and at a large gathering, that it was "funny how our ages were getting closer together all the time!"

It seems to be an inherently feminine trait to want to turn back the calendar, and probably it's a good thing for the only way any woman can look convincingly younger than her age—or even to hold her own—is to be radiantly well.

Protect Your Youth

Our best chance of staying young is to follow a diet that is optimal in the protective elements: Fruits, vegetables, milk, eggs, whole grains and butter—they are really the beauty foods, for they are essential to a healthy condition of the skin, hair, eyes, teeth and to the general well being. As you can see, too many pastries, cocktails and heavy rich foods have no place in your scheme for youth.

Outside of a lift, the only way to save your face is through relaxation—and the diligent use of cold cream. Relaxation is the latest recognized beauty aid. At the salons, they stress the value of relaxation right along with the quality of their creams! And, alas, we know all the cream in the world doesn't seem to help the woman who is harassed and rushed and tense all the time. She hasn't a chance of looking young! That inner calm is something you have to achieve for yourself in the way that works best for you.

The third measure is just as important as either of the others—and that's to keep supple. After sifting through the numerous theories of exercise to keep in condition, one well known doctor has come to the conclusion that simply putting all your joints through their full range of motion every day will keep anyone from getting stiff and creaky.

Loosen Up

Here are some of the joint lubricators suggested:

To loosen up the knee joints, sit on the edge of a table, with the lower legs hanging free, and swing alternate legs back and forth, free and easy. Then swing legs together, from side to side. Follow this knee action with a half-knee bend, then a deep-knee bend. If your knees creak, it's a sign you need it.

To keep the hips supple, stand with the hand on a doorway for support and swing the opposite leg forward and backward in a loose-jointed swing. Follow this by swinging the leg out to the side. Don't make exercise of this—it's just limbering up.

Now for the arms and shoulders . . . Begin with the right arm, and fling it up and back in a complete circle, circling several times. Circle with the other arm. Then fling the arm out to the side and up. Repeat with the other arm.

The Gentler Sex

Everywoman's Summer Credo

That her husband's health would be much better and it would be a lot easier on her if he didn't want some hot heavy meat every meal. (And what's more, all of her friends' husbands are simply crazy about salads in hot weather).

That nearly every woman she knows has had or is going to have a much more exciting vacation than herself.

That by some bad stroke of luck she assembled all the wrong clothes this summer, but that next spring she's going to be smart enough to lay in early some nifty little numbers that are not only smart looking but comfortable in 98-degree temperatures.

That summer bachelors left behind by their families are madly pursued by hordes of women on the loose, and if the poor harassed victims weaken and fall occasionally, it's not so much their fault.

That it is especially hard on her to keep her children entertained and busy during vacation because they seem to have so much more energy and vitality than other children.

That virtually every woman except herself is (very sensibly) taking advantage of the August fur sales.

That all other families than her own eat out a great deal in hot weather and that of course she's probably a fool not to demand that sort of thing instead of keeping her nose over a hot cookstove to save the pennies but then—well she always was the type to spoil a man.

That at every bridge club or Sunday School picnic she always winds up preparing the most difficult dish and doing all the dirty work—simply because she is such an easy mark.

That she has more relatives who go traveling in summer than any other woman.

That her permanent has gotten more limp than any other woman's and that as a matter of fact she had it at the wrong time for the best summer wear. (And that somehow she always manages to get her permanents at the wrong time.)

That no other woman extant has as many friends who this summer got married, had babies, took voyages, celebrated wedding anniversaries or staged commencements, recitals or birthday parties for their children.

That she's particularly sensitive to the humidity and that in some strange way it does things to her brain.

But she may look like a dowd now, but just wait until she gets dressed up in the new fall outfit she is planning and she'll be an entirely different person and everyone will completely forget how she looked downtown that day the mercury went to 100 degrees.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Knee Rejuvenation

ON THE BEACH at playgrounds and every type of summer resort knees are on display. Some are smooth, fair, bedimpled and lovely; others are wrinkled, scrawny, fat, weatherworn and, I hate to say it—dirty. Many an ugly knee spoils the appearance of a trim calf and ankle. But there are simple methods of beautifying the knees.

If the knees are too fat daily exercise will taper them to a normal size. And if they are too thin, exercise will fill out the hollows. Massage acts in two ways—it decreases the overly fat and stimulates the lean to firmer, rounder molds. Also, it smooths out wrinkles and helps to eliminate rough spots.

Knees that are rough may be smoothed by applying a good tissue or nourishing cream. Rub a little almond or olive or a protective sun lotion while sitting in the sun. A little bleaching—if you are fair—will rid the knees of a grimy look.

To make sure that the knees are spotlessly clean, scrub them daily with warm water, soap and a fairly stiff brush.

A WOMAN'S

Mrs. Young, Here, Is Only Woman Supervising Distribution of Movies

UNFAMILIAR to most District movie-goers is the collection of buildings clustered around New Jersey avenue and K street northwest, where representatives of Hollywood companies handle the distribution of motion pictures throughout the Washington area. Head booker at Twentieth Century-Fox is Mrs. Sara S. Young, only woman here to hold that important job.

She arranges the complicated circuit by which a new picture moves without slip-ups from big first-run theaters to "subsequent runs" "neighborhoods" to you). Her territory includes not only Washington but Maryland, Virginia and part of West Virginia. Minor crises are frequent. An exhibitor in Bristol, Va., nearly 400 miles away, will telephone to ask why his film for the next day's show has not arrived. Mrs. Young discovers that the Lynchburg theater which last showed the picture neglected to send it on. She must find another print and ship it to Bristol by air express.

The Washington office receives from four to ten prints of each movie, depending on its quality. Rentals paid by exhibitors range from $12.50 a run to as high as $6,000 at a first-run house. Mrs. Young sees all Twentieth Century-Fox pictures at weekly screenings held in the local office; in addition, she frequently spends her evenings in movie houses, partly to study audience reactions and partly because she just likes movies. She saw "Alexander's Ragtime Band" eight times.

A lad in the Department of Justice was about to be married and thought it would be wise to read up on the subject. He was disappointed to learn when he went to the Library of Congress that all books on sex and marriage are kept in the Rare Book Room—hours: 9 to 4:30, and 9 to 1 on Saturday. Since he works the same hours, he had to go ahead and get married without benefit of literature.

TODAY'S MYSTERY—On the hottest day of the year, when most of us would have been glad to lounge around in the bathtub, 19 of the 20 frogs in the window of O'Donnell's Sea Grill had climbed out of their tank and were perched around its edge. The twentieth frog was making futile efforts to dislodge one of his friends so that he, too, could sit on the shore.

Off for Three Weeks' Field Training

1 Good-bys were fond and sad yesterday as Washington's own soldiers departed for training in the Plattsburg area. Corpl. George Snyder embraces Shirley Gibson. On Hand. . . .

2 . . . to see Theodore Baxley, another member of the 121st Engineers, off for three weeks of training, was his nephew, Franklin Downing, who likes the idea of soldiering. There was. . . .

3 . . . hard work, too, before departing for nothern New York. Special Troops of the Twenty-ninth Division are shown filing into the National Guard Armory empty-handed and emerging with loads of equipment. Some of the guardsmen traveled north by trucks and others by train. There's always. . . .

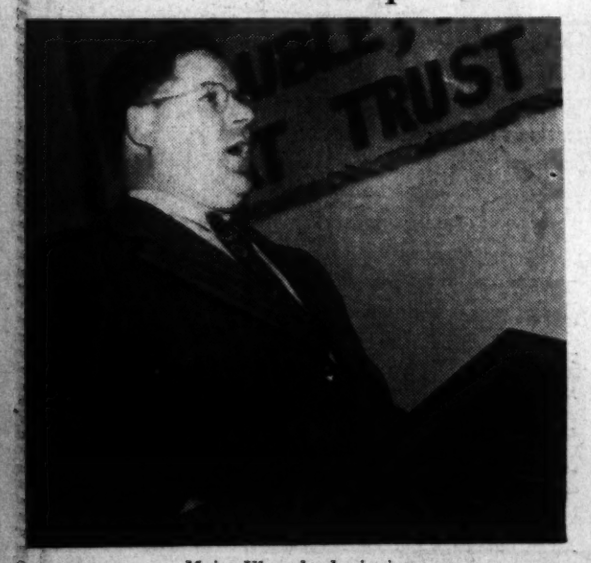
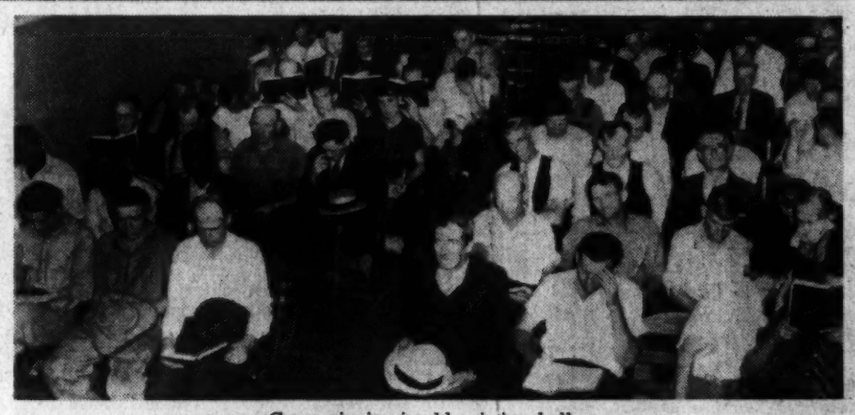
4 . . . time for horse-play in the guard. Richard Lang of the 260th Coast Artillery fell asleep in a sidecar and Eugene Winston of the 121st Engineers couldn't resist the temptation to give him the hot-foot. That'll teach him alertness. All aboard. . . .

5 . . . and they're off for a period of intensive training that will make better soldiers of these citizens who willingly give up a certain amount of their time each year to make the United States a more secure place in which to live. "Good-by, Washington. Be seein' you in three weeks."

Volunteers of America Move to New Headquarters



Major Ulrey leads singing



Group singing in old mission hall

New location in old Scottish Rite Temple

By Robert Tate Allan

GOSPEL singing by wayfarers from 28 States and the District, and prayers and inspirational messages from mission leaders yesterday closed a chapter in the life of the Volunteers of America Relief Mission.

After a decade at 471-473 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, during which 500,000 men have been materially and spiritually nourished, the mission begins today to occupy a new site—the old Scottish Rite Temple at Third and E streets northwest.

"I DON'T care what is the color of your face, or what church you belong to, or whether you ever belonged to any, we are all the same in the sight of God," Maj. W. O. Ulrey, mission superintendent, said in his opening prayer.

Mrs. Ulrey sang. She is said once to have declined a radio singing offer because she felt her duty rested in sharing the major's work.

FOLLOWING the program there was beef stew, bread and coffee, and a special treat of ice cream. The men loaded chairs hymnals and other articles on the mission's trucks to be moved to the new location.

The new spot, Maj. Ulrey told the audience, will have 15 times as much floor space, and, to begin with, 150 beds. The dining hall will seat 500, and the Volunteers expect to feed at least 1,000 people daily.

While they are leasing the property, with an option to buy, they hope a financial drive in October will net enough for a substantial down payment on the purchase price.

Hit-Runners Injure Two D. C. Women

Both Victims in Hospital; D. C. Boy, Chevy Chase Lad Hurt In Other Accidents

Two Washingtonians were seriously injured yesterday in accidents involving hit-run motorists.

Mary B. Martin, 35, colored, of 2704 K street northwest, was struck down by a runaway driver in the 3000 block M street northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital with a possibly fractured skull and spine. Also taken to Emergency was Marion Woodson, 21, colored, of 450 P street, who was hurt when a car in which she was riding collided with that of a hit-run motorists on Route No. 4 near La Plata, Md. She suffered a fractured jaw and right shoulder and head injuries.

Collision of a motorcycle and auto at 4340 Connecticut avenue northwest sent Irving L. Bragg, 21, of Chevy Chase, to Emergency Hospital for treatment. Bragg, the cyclist, suffered head and hip injuries. Driver of the auto, police said, was William W. Denlinger, 17, of 6800 Western avenue northwest.

A two-car crash on the Benning road bridge resulted in head injuries to Hunter W. Proctor, 28, of Huntsville, Md. Police listed the other driver as William B. Seyford, of Rockville, Md.

Eugene Collins, 13, of 455½ Fifteenth street northeast, was one of five boys in a Leonardtown, Md., hospital yesterday with injuries received in an auto accident late Saturday night.

The auto, driven by Joe Pilkerton, 18, of Milestown, Md., ran off the road near Milestown to avoid striking some persons on the roadside, an official at St. Mary's Hospital said.

Of the seven boys in the auto, five were brought to the hospital, three seriously injured. Young Collins, with a slight injury to his back, was held for observation. Pilkerton and Marvin Shotwell, 14, Bushwood, Md., received internal injuries. Francis Russell, 17, Abell, Md., was seriously injured about the head and face. George Faunce, 17, Palmers, Md., was slightly injured and held for observation at the hospital.

Frank S. Flynn, 48, who lives aboard the yacht Leatherwood in the Washington Channel, was seriously injured early this morning when struck by an automobile as he crossed the Speedway at the Fourteenth street exit. He was taken to Providence Hospital with three fractured ribs and possible internal injuries and later transferred to Walter Reed Hospital.

Police charged William A. Hughins, 41, of Alexandria, with reckless driving of the car which struck Flynn.

Mission Board Head Addresses 'Y' Services In Lincoln Park

A Christian outlook is necessary for "seeing through" the present world crisis, William H. De Groot, jr., president of the board of Central Union Mission, said here yesterday.

Addressing the Y. M. C. A.-sponsored services in Lincoln Park, one of several midsummer union programs throughout the city, De Groot pointed out that one's perspective should be accurate and fear should not be permitted to affect one's clarity of thinking.

"It is necessary for Christians to stand four-square for the things that are right, and four square against the things that are wrong in these critical days," he declared.

William R. Schmucker led group-singing and read the Scripture; the Rev. A. Lincoln Smith, assistant pastor of National Baptist Memorial Church, and Dr. Freeley Rohrer, official of the Washington City Presbytery, gave devotions, and Mrs. Margaret R. Moffat served as organist. More than 20 congregations were represented.

No moral progress is possible without the "inner man," the Rev. Donald F. B. Hoyt, pastor of the Brattleboro (Vt.) Universalist Church, said yesterday at union rites at Universalist National Memorial Church. All Souls' Unitarian and Mount Pleasant Congregational Churches cooperated with the Universalist Church.

"His voice condemns us for wrongdoing, chides us for righteousness only half-hearted, and agrees with the judgments of the righteous man," he said.

Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren and the Rev. Bernard I. Barnes, pastor of the North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, addressed joint services of Southeast Protestant congregations at Fifteenth Street Christian Church and the Washington City Church of the Brethren, respectively.

Chevy Chase Protestant churches met for their weekly union rites last night on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase Circle, with the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, host rector, speaking.

Beauty Contest Planned at Picnic

Selection of a beauty queen to represent Montgomery County at the Timonium Fair next month, will feature the annual basket picnic of the Farm Bureau tomorrow from 10 to 5 at Monocacy Park, near Dickerson, Md. Girls from 16 to 21 will be eligible to compete.

Other features of the program will be a tug of war between men and women and a drill by the Drum and Bugle Corps of the Barber-Briggs Post of the American Legion, Gaithersburg. Mrs. Edwin Fry, of Laytonsville, has charge of arrangements for the picnic.

Thousands Hear Daltry Company's 'Pirates of Penzance' at Watergate

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra collaborates with Daltry Opera Company in presenting Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance" at the Potomac Watergate Sunday night, under the direction of Joseph N. Daltry. Cast of characters:

Richard, a pirate king ....Walter Tibbetts
Samuel, his lieutenant .....Ernest Eames
Frederick, a pirate apprentice ..... Carlton Bentley
Ruth, a piratical maid-of-all-work ..... Anne Dawson
Maj. Gen. Stanley .....Frank Kierman
Mabel Stanley .....Janet Webb
Kate Stanley .....Mary Olmstead
Edith Stanley .....Reta Baum
Isabel Stanley .....Mariola Ditto
Edward, a sergeant of police ..... Merrill Cook

Attendance records at the Potomac Watergate suffered no declination last night when thousands of music-lovers crowded to hear the National Symphony Orchestra and the Daltry Opera Company in a rollicking performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance." The weather was in one of its moods of agreement with the bureau which attempts to forecast its vagaries, and this accord added the last touch to the enjoyment of the throng who had counted upon "fair and cooler" as the accompaniment of an evening's pleasure.

BROWN

A starry sky spread over the river rippled by a continuous breeze and the serried rows of auditors were not only comfortable but also free from apprehension of a passing squall. It was a merry assemblage bent upon amusement, and that it received in a full measure. The landlubbers on the shore were reinforced by enough canoeists to have repelled the company of pirates on the stage of the barge had there been any need for such a sally.

The Daltry Opera Company, of which good reports had been received, proved to be one of those youthful troupes animated by a fine esprit de corps and unhampered by the "star" system. The voices were fresh and vigorous, and the acting had zest as well as the easy movement that tells of good training. Best of all, the performance demonstrated a comradeship among the singers that made the chorus a potential source of principals.

Walter Tibbetts was the swaggering pirate king with a voice of good swashbuckling timbre, and Carlton Bentley gave a commendable account of himself in the tenor role of Frederick, the lad who had been mistakenly apprenticed to a life of crime. Anne Dawson impersonated Ruth, whose deafness had led to the unfortunate confusion between pilot and pirate. Frank Kierman employed comedic talent in the part of Maj. Gen. Stanley, and Janet Webb disclosed, as his youngest daughter, a voice of light flexibility.

Of all the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, "The Pirates of Penzance" has the distinction of being the only one produced in the United States before it was heard in England. That happened December 31, 1879, in the Fifth Avenue Theater, New York, under the personal direction of both the composer and the librettist, who sought to protect in this way their American copyright. Despite their effort, "The Pirates" was duly pirated, as others had been before.

It is a curious thing that the perfect collaboration between William S. Gilbert and Arthur S. Sullivan has been rewarded by an inseparable union of their names such as exists in no other team of the kind. The composer usually gets the glory and the librettist is left with a mention on the program. We do not speak of Smith and De Kovin's "Robin Hood" or of Smith and Herbert's "The Wizard of the Nile," although Harry B. Smith was a clever and valuable partner in those works. But Sullivan without Gilbert would be as unthinkable as Damon without Pythias.

Sullivan's immediate creative response to the lyrics of Gilbert was as remarkable as his gift for parody. He could catch the idiom of other composers and use it with a neatness that at once paid a tribute to the composer he imitated and made fun of his mannerisms. In "The Pirates of Penzance" there are many instances of this adroitness. Verdi is travestied in the waltz that might have come from "La Traviata" and Mendelssohn's melodic line wavers through the love duet in the second act.

Speedboat Runs Wild as Swell Pitches Four Into West River

Two Girls and Two Youths Are Rescued Near Shady Side, Md., After Craft Runs Aground; Other Boats Imperiled

A speedboat ran wild on the West River yesterday after a heavy swell had pitched its four occupants into the water off Shady Side, Md.

For more than five minutes the 18-foot motorboat churned wildly around the river, imperiling the lives of the two girls and two youths floundering in the water and preventing a rescue, since other craft feared a collision with the pilotless craft.

Rescued after the speedboat finally had run ashore were Miss Glorious L. Andrews, 20, of Shady Side, a Hood College senior; Miss Patricia Harrah, 18, of 319 New Jersey avenue northwest, a Central High School graduate; Buck Kline, 21, and Howard Shentom, 21, both of Shady Side, who are connected with the Capitol Printing Ink Co.

The four were racing along the river in Kline's Zephyr when a swell caught the boat as it was making a turn. The four were tossed into the river, but the craft righted itself and, with the rudder set for a turn, it kept circling around in the river, menacing its former crew and other river craft.

The unusual accident took place about a mile from shore. Good swimmers, the four were finally rescued by the Skipjack, a yacht out of West River.

Hunter Edington's Widow Dies at 75

Mrs. Minnie L. Edington, widow of Hunter S. Edington and a resident of Washington for 40 years, died yesterday at 3720 Upton street northwest, after a long illness, at the age of 75.

Funeral services will be held from the Deal funeral home on Thursday at 2 p. m. and burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Edington has been active in the Calvary Baptist Church for about 25 years. Surviving are her daughter, Mrs. Andrew J. Parker; a son, Wallace D. Edington, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Gussie Behr, of St. Louis.

D. C. Green Guards To Rehearse Part In Fair Pageant

Members of the Green Guards of America, Inc., an organization of uniformed women marchers, will rehearse at 7 p. m. Thursday for a pageant, Great Women of the Past, which will feature Green Guard Day at the New York World's Fair August 24.

Mrs. Virginia Nowell, organizer of the guards, said the pageant is intended to demonstrate that "from the brave women of the past" her organization has "received a heritage of which we are very proud."

Historic women to be represented in the pageant will include Cleopatra, Queen Elizabeth, Pocahontas, Annie Oakley and Carrie Nation.

The rehearsal will be at 1742 Church street northwest.

Young People Take Over Church Services At Several Washington Congregations

Young people's organizations of many congregations led several worship services and conducted other programs last night. In some instances, their services were given in the absence of clergymen on vacation.

Lincoln Road Methodist Church's youth council, of which Miss Aurelia Carter is president, took over last night's services, presenting a pageant, "The Builders." Dr. R. H. Stone, pastor, is preaching on Sunday mornings in August, but special programs are being given on Sunday nights.

Young men and women of Petworth Methodist Church conducted the first half of the evening service in Fellowship Hall, with Thomas Kelly in charge. Claude Loew read the Scripture; Mary Ann Davenport offered a prayer, and Jean Shaffer brought the inspirational message.

The Epworth League led the evening rites at Union Methodist Church, with Arnold Fort as speaker. Earlier, members of the congregation were guests of the young people at a tea and fellowship hour in the parish hall. Congress Street Methodist youths also conducted the evening service.

Following a custom which is becoming increasingly popular among local church youths—outdoor religious services during summer months—the Christian Endeavor Society of Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church enjoyed their annual pilgrimage to Sugar Loaf Mountain, near Frederick, Md.

The Rev. Kenneth Lyons, pastor of Mount Tabor Methodist Church, Georgetown, principal speaker, stressed the necessity of "spiritual vision" in his message on "Having Eyes to See."

Members of the endeavor societies of Mount Tabor Methodist, Keller Memorial Lutheran, Rhode Island Avenue Methodist and Fourth Presbyterian churches were guests of the Wallace group. Jesse Stimson and Frank McGreary, past presidents of the District Endeavor Union, attended.

Heat Victim Kept Waiting 39 Minutes for Aid, Says Woman

Patrol Wagon Fails to Arrive Until After Third Call, Georgetown Residents Declare; Police Officer Disputes Time of Summons

Less than 24 hours after the Metropolitan Police Department had absolved itself of blame in connection with the delayed arrival of an ambulance at the scene of a fatal accident, Georgetown residents accused No. 7 Precinct Station of delay in dispatching aid to an unconscious man lying on a sidewalk.

The unconscious man, Al Wesley, colored, 35, of McLean, Va., who later was treated at Georgetown Hospital for heat exhaustion and released, was found lying on the sidewalk in front of 1643 Wisconsin avenue northwest yesterday morning by Mrs. Elizabeth Hartung, of 1647 Wisconsin avenue.

Mrs. Hartung said she hurried to her house and called No. 7 Precinct Police Station, which is just two blocks away. The call was made at 11:36 a. m. by her watch, she said, and added that a patrol wagon from the precinct did not arrive to take the man to Georgetown Hospital, six blocks away, until 12:15 p. m., 39 minutes after she had called.

Meanwhile, two other persons had called the precinct, it was reported.

About noon Mrs. Mary A. Fennelly, of 1645 Wisconsin avenue, said she made the second call at the instance of Mrs. Hartung when aid had not yet arrived. A third person, Barney Menditch, of 1651 Wisconsin avenue, said he called for an ambulance a few minutes after Miss Fennelly.

At the precinct, however, station clerk Officer Bolivar N. Bradshaw disputed the time of the first call, which he said was from a woman at 12:10 p. m. A second woman called, Bradshaw added, "a few minutes later." It was verified that the patrol wagon arrived on the scene at 12:15 p. m. as Mrs. Hartung had stated. Bradshaw said he followed the customary procedure by dispatching a scout car and a motorcycle policeman to the scene.

Precinct Capt. Clarence Tally, when he heard about the complaint, pointed out that his men were under orders to first send a scout car to investigate ambulance requests.

Spiders Bring Out Two Fire Companies

Two spiders in a house late yesterday brought out Fire Engine Company 29 and No. 5 Truck Company, caused firemen to walk a quarter mile, part of this through a muddy culvert, and disturbed a drowsy man's sleep.

Mrs. Angie Mathers, of 4962 Canal road, saw the spiders in her house. She began fumigating with a preparation of sulphur, then left home. William Mathers went to sleep on the front porch.

Neighbors saw the fumes pouring from windows and called the firemen. The firemen took the walk because their apparatus couldn't cross the canal. Mathers awakened, said "spiders" and went back to sleep.

D. C. Woman Studies In New Hampshire

Among the 520 students completing courses at the University of New Hampshire's summer session, which ends August 9, are Mrs. Ruth M. Taylor, of Washington, and Miss Betsy Ross, of Takoma Park.

Mrs. Taylor, of 1119 West Virginia avenue northeast, is a teacher in the Columbia Institution for the Deaf. This summer she is studying supervision of reading and the American short story.

Miss Ross, of 1237 Maple avenue, Takoma Park, a student at the University of Maryland, is attending the marine zoological laboratory of the university.

Handbook Prepared On Indian Law

A "Handbook of Federal Indian Law" has been prepared by Felix S. Cohen, chief of the Indian law survey, Justice Department and member of the board of appeals, Interior Department.

Nathan R. Margold, Interior Department solicitor, wrote the introduction, relating to Indian self-government aspects. The need for a thorough analysis of legal problems surrounding Indian litigation prompted preparation of the book, it was said.

Faith Needed In This Age, Clerics Say

Inferiority Complex Troubles America, Clergyman Asserts; Other Sermon Views

The chief issue of our day is whether future civilization will be built upon a materialistic or Christian foundation, the Rev. Nathanial C. Acton told worshipers yesterday morning at St. John's Episcopal "Church of the Presidents," Lafayette Square.

At the same hour worshipers of Eastern Presbyterian Church, Sixth and Maryland avenue northeast, heard their new pastor, the Rev. William Nesbit Vincent, say that America was suffering from a national inferiority complex.

Mr. Acton, assistant pastor of St. John's, said the ideals, faith and morals of Christianity were at stake, and urged response to the "gravity of the situation and to the call to defend and preserve for the age which is dawning a firm faith in an omnipotent God."

America needs to lose its national inferiority complex if it is to conquer the "giants" of unemployment, overproduction, poverty, insecurity and cynicism, Mr. Vincent declared.

This land was never settled or built by people with "grasshopper" outlooks on life, he asserted, adding that "because we face giant problems, it will take giant faith to solve them."

"God is still on the march, is still able to lift us above our man-made problems," he said.

Talks on Immortality

Man's eternal existence is a fact based solidly upon the integrity of the sacred Scriptures, the Rev. Dale Crowley said at yesterday's 4 o'clock vespers at the Little Church of Fort Lincoln.

Launching a sermon series on the general theme of "Man's Immortality," he said:

"The question of 'will the soul live forever?' is one which human philosophy cannot answer, science can never solve, nor can reason interpret. Only through the divine revelation can we know the truth.

"And in proportion as man seeks to understand this transcendent question by the vagaries of human philosophies, in that degree will he become an agnostic, drifting from the truth."

The choir of Mount Rainier (Md.) Methodist Church, under Mrs. Hayward Baker, sang.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Warners Remember A Successful Formula

Best-Sellers, Hit Plays Basis of Year's Output; 'March of Time' Explores Dutch East Indies; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WITH COMMERCIAL SAGACITY and a high flight of sentimental regard, the Warner Brothers are adhering to a formula that has served them well in the past.

I recall a season 'way back yonder in the old silent days of the cinema, when the Freres Warner startled the industry by announcing the picturization of a miniature library of best-sellers, biographies and hit stage plays. They are doing the same thing for the season of 1940-41, according to an inside tip from Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in the Washington territory.

BELL

Among the 48 feature productions planned for the forthcoming year, it seems there are 18 best-selling novels, 12 stage successes and 11 original stories, fashioned specifically for the films. In addition there will be two "specials," to be released separately—"The Life of John Doe," being produced by Frank Capra and Robert Riskin, with Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck costarred, and "The Man Who Came to Dinner," from the current stage hit by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart.

In picking out a few high spots of the schedule, one could hardly overlook "The Story of Knute Rockne," starring Pat O'Brien; "City for Conquest," costarring James Cagney and Ann Sheridan; "The Story of John Paul Jones," another Cagney vehicle, or "No Time for Comedy," adapted from the S. N. Behrman play in which Katharine Cornell and Laurence Olivier starred on Broadway, with James Stewart, Rosalind Russell and Charlie Ruggles succeeding to the principal roles.

Then there are "The Amazing Story of Sergt. York," hero of the First World War; "Capt. Horatio Hornblower" and "Santa Fe Trail," both with Errol Flynn; "Honeymoon for Three," with Olivia de Havilland, George Brent and Priscilla Lane; "Mr. Skeffington" and "Calamity Jane," for Bette Davis; "High Sierra," starring Humphrey Bogart in the role Paul Muni declined, and "The Constant Nymph," costarring Flynn and Miss de Havilland, for the steenth time.

If you would care for other titles with a familiar ring, there are "King's Row," Cronin's "Jupiter Laughs," "A Dispatch from Reuters," with Edward G. Robinson as the founder of the famous news service; "Fiesta in Manhattan," "Tugboat Annie Sails Again," with Marjorie Rambeau and Alan Hale wearing the shoes of Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery; "House on the Hill," "The Male Animal," "January Heights," "Quietly My Captain Waits," "They Died with Their Boots On," "The Frontier Doctor," "The Lost Battalion," and so forth and so on, ad lib.

So what are you worrying about?

Maybe that duet Allan Jones sings with himself in "The Boys From Syracuse," next at RKO-Keith's, wasn't as tough a mechanical problem as it seemed at first blush. I suppose, come to think of it, that Allan could have made a recording of one part and then sung the second part to the playback for the sound track. Stop me if I'm wrong—which seems as likely as not.

So some Washington friends strolled into a swank resort hotel at Banff, which is in Alberta, Canada, and, first thing, ran smack dab into Mickey Rooney, batting his way through a game of table tennis—at which, by the way, he is one of the none-better-thanners. "Of all things!" "Imagine meeting you here," "It's a small world, after all," or chit-chat to that effect.

That rumor that has been inkled here, off and on, now has taken the form of a definite statement in the motion picture trade press, to wit: Master J. Raymond Bell, chief pufficist of the Loew interests in the National Capital—our adopted father, who is no relation—winner of more national awards for ne plus ultra exploitation campaigns than any other space-grabber in the business, is about to assume a similar post in the New York home office of Loew's, Inc., to show the Manhattan tub-thumpers, cymbal-whangers and horn-tooters how it is done. Congratulations. Or are we beating the gun by a split-second or so?

If you can get your mind off "The Ramparts We Watch" for a minute or two, it may be of interest that the next issue of "The March of Time" will be devoted to "Spoils of Conquest"—all about the dilemma facing the Dutch East Indies today and what's with Japan and the chief source of rubber and tin, vitally needed for the United States defense program. Wurra, wurra!

Department-of-Communications Note

Personal aside to Harry P. Somerville, coproducer with Bess Davis Schreiner of "The Night of January 16;" Jules Levey, producer of "The Boys From Syracuse," and Rita Swann, of the Baltimore News-Post, knee deep in the Hilltop Theater's production of "Our Town:" Thanks for the beer and the buggy ride. You'll be seeing me around, you're afraid!

A Political Career Gets Off to Flying Start

IT PAYS TO VOTE 37 TIMES, AT $2 EACH

So Dan McGinty, in the person of Brian Donlevy, second from right, discovers when he faces The Boss, Akim Tamiroff, at left. Even The Politician, William Demarest, extreme right, seems impressed. All this would be in "The Great McGinty," coming Friday to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, with Mr. Donlevy in the title role

Visiting Star Bubbles Over WithAnecdotes

Frederick Tozere Here To Play in Saroyan's 'Heart's in Highland'

When you meet Frederick Tozere, in town as guest star for "My Heart's In the Highlands," which the speech and drama department of Catholic University is playing at the Sylvan Tuesday evening and at its own campus theater the following three nights, get him to tell you some stories. That husky fellow has enough to oil A. Woollcott's tongue.

Taste of one might be of the time Noel Coward was introduced to the socially mighty Lady Diana Manners, celebrated for her role in "The Miracle." Lady Diana was nobly aloof: "I saw your 'Private Lives,' Mr. Coward, and didn't find it the least bit amusing." Mr. Coward looked completely crushed, sighed: "Oh, Lady Diana, I saw you in "The Miracle" and thought you were a scream!"

Has Been Around

He's got a lot more, and should have, for while he's only in the middle thirties, he's been around. Began as premier danseur with the Russian Ballet in New York, went into musical comedy under C. B. Billingham and appeared in "Stepping Stones" and "Criss Cross." When he married Mary Brady, of the musicals, Billingham fired him: "It's all right if you want to live together, but marriage! tch-tch!"

Then came stock, "too much of it," and most recently Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo." Last several weeks he's been roaming the shootier suburban theaters 'round New York with Claudia Morgan, both slumming in "The Bat." It was fun.

After "My Heart's In the Highlands" he goes to New York for rehearsals for one of the leads in the new Maxwell Anderson "Journey to Jerusalem," first on the new season's list of the Playwrights' Company.

In 'Escape'

Bonita Granville won her first screen part as Ann Harding's daughter, because of her resemblance to the actress. She currently appears as Ursula in the picturization of Ethel Vance's best-selling novel, "Escape."

Starlet Rides

Virginia Weidler's many hours of riding her pet pinto pony will come in handy when she rides a horse for a scene in "The Philadelphia Story."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, August 4.

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT invited a number of his friends to spend some time with him at the Vermont island they all own . . . Harpo Marx heeded the call, arrived there, and was assigned to one of the guest-rooms. He went to that room, and didn't emerge until the next evening. "I found a new edition of the Bible in the room," he explained, "and I spent all that time reading it from cover to cover" . . . "What do you think of the Bible?" Woollcott asked him . . . "As a book, there's only one criticism," said Harpo. "There's nobody to root for.'

MOSS HART entertained Gertrude Lawrence at his 88-acre farm in New Hope, Pa. Miss Lawrence made an inspection tour of the premises, and then told Hart: "But why do you prefer such a large place? The nearest neighbor is miles away. Don't you like neighbors, Moss?" . . . "Oh, I love neighbors," Hart confessed, "but I also am passionately fond of eating onions."

EVERETT SLOANE, of Orson Welles' Mercury Theater group, listened to Peter Lorre reminisce of the days when he became a film star in Europe . . . "Do you know," Lorre asked, "that at one time I accepted a seven-year contract to work for UFA, the German movie company?" . . . "I didn't know that," said Sloane. "Before anyone signs a seven-year contract with UFA, he first has to break a mirror."

ERSKINE GWYNNE, who conducted a column for the Paris Herald-Tribune until the Germans arrived, wears the coveted ribbon of the French Academy. Gwynne received that decoration after he had been one of the youngest soldiers fighting in the World War . . . During his last visit here, Gwynne came into the Stork Club, wearing that decoration. Henny Youngman told him: "I could've gotten the same decoration, but I was too ugly" . . . "Being ugly has nothing to do with it," Gwynne insisted . . . "Oh yes it has," Youngman replied. "I couldn't get a French general to kiss me."

JANE PICKENS, the singer, now is in Hollywood, after having spurned film offers for many years. Miss Pickens, who won a Juilliard opera scholarship, refused a Paramount job because the role assigned her was that of a bad girl . . . "But many stars portray bad girls," she was reminded. "There's really nothing wrong in portraying a bad girl, in the movies" . . . "The only bad girl I'll portray," stated the opera-minded Miss Pickens, "is 'Carmen.'"

CHARLES MACARTHUR, who co-authored "The Front Page," still has a newspaper-gauge for all his enterprises . . . MacArthur went to Metro, where terms were discussed with him. "We don't know what to pay you, Charlie," a producer confessed to him. "What do you think you're worth?" . . . "$75 a week to any newspaper," answered MacArthur, "and $2,500 a week to you."

GRACIE ALLEN, who is completing the furnishings of her new home, told George Burns: "I saw three genuine early-American rocking chairs, at only $750 each, I'm buying those three chairs. That proves I know all about Art" . . . "No it doesn't," her husband lamented. "It only proves that you don't know how much three times 750 is."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, publishers of Ernest Hemingway's new book, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," now are making the final arrangements for the book's release. The editors will exercise more care, in marking the manuscript, than they did during the editing of Hemingway's "To Have and To Have Not." During that job, Robert Bridges, the Scribner's editor, deleted the four-letter words. He placed all these censorable words on a pad of paper—and then interrupted his job to go to lunch . . . One of the staff entered his room, and discovered this shocking list. More shocking, however, was the fact that for these notations, Bridges had used the only memo-pad available—a pad marked "Things I Must Remember To Do Today."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 4 (INS).—Every time Cesar Romero has been up for a big break something has happened. As you know, he was all set to dance and romance with Betty Grable in "Down Argentine Way" when he was taken so very sick and had to remain in the hospital for weeks. But he is going to have his chance to go South American now in "A Latin from Manhattan." This original, by Mark Canfield, will be the third whooperdooper musical Zanuck has lined up, starting with the almost completed "Down Argentine Way" followed by "Tin Pan Alley" and then "Latin from Manhattan."

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Make no mistake, Hollywood is wooing the South American market as no box-office territory has ever been wooed before. Almost every studio has some sort of an Argentine opus on the fire or scheduled. The reason most of them are musicals is because our Latin neighbors like their tunes and pretty girls. Well, so do we Yankees.

Ida Lupino might just as well unpack her suitcase at Warners and plan to stay there permanently. She's been given a new contract which calls for four pitchers a year—a little plot on the part of the Warner lads to keep her from doing outside work. I don't think I have ever seen this studio as pepped up over a star's prospects as they are over little Lupino's future. Stories are being made ready for her in the same manner that Bette Davis' lineup is arranged. In addition to "Hard Luck Dame," the original by Charles Kenyon, which stars her, and the lead in "High Sierra," they are negotiating for a well known stage play for her.

Eugenie Leontovich, famed stage actress and star of the movie "Four Sons," will have an important part in "Ballerina," Gregory Ratoff's Paramount picture. It should be well worth seeing the excitable Greg direct his talented wife, who is the one person in the world from whom he takes orders. This picture stars Loretta Young and it will be her first after she returns from her honeymoon in Mexico, where she is now with her bridegroom, Tom Lewis.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jerry Wald and Herta Margot, the beautiful refugee, a Ciro's twosome; that was Jean Myras with Eddie Norris at the Hollywood Tropics. Eddie was once wed to Anne Sheridan; Jack Warner flew to San Francisco last Friday to take the Lurline for Honolulu, where he will meet Mrs. Warner; George Walsh, former star and Raoul's brother, is out of the hospital after an eight weeks siege caused by a horse falling on him. Raoul, by the way, is busy these days taking bows on "They Drive By Night," a box office winner.

Ellen Drew and Arnold Kunody have discovered each other; the Johnny Weissmullers have reserved a room in a San Francisco hospital for August 25 in anticipation of the stork's visit; Owen Crump a daily visitor on the "Calling All Husbands'" set. Lucille Fairbanks is the attraction; Hugh Herbert is buying even more property in San Fernando valley; Rita Hayworth and Eddie Juldson, her husband, have taken up bicycling in earnest; Roy Rogers has been handed a colonel's commission by Gov. Miles, of New Mexico.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Trans-Lux

If you would care to scale the heights, precariously and vicariously, it may be done at the Trans-Lux Theater this week during the unreeling of "Kamet Conquered," a mountain-climbing subject in which screen adventurers achieve the feat of climbing 24,447 feet to the peak of the Himalayas.

If, on the other hand, it is sheer tomfoolery you seek, that may be found in "Nurse Mates," one of the more nonsensical of the "Popeye, the Sailor" cartoon comedies, in which Swee'pea is the object of some of the most bizarre solicitude ever animated from the point of a pen.

Again, if interest centers in one of the outstanding public figures of the day, there is on the bill that popular issue of "Information Please," in which Clifton Fadiman finds Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell L. Willkie among his quartet of human encyclopedias additionally composed of John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams and the incorrigible Oscar Levant. Mr. Willkie is one of the most engaging guests this picturized radio feature has presented.

The news section of the bill, as always, is comprehensive and interesting, covering, as it does, major happenings in all parts of the world as recorded by all of the principal newsreel agencies.

To summarize the hour-and-a-quarter of short-reel diversion, it would seem to embody something of merit for every variation of public fancy.

Coinage System Invented for Film

Because of the somewhat unstable conditions of the Dutch East Indies, Director John Cromwell had to invent a coinage system. Cromwell is directing Fredric March, Betty Field and others in Paramount's filmization of Joseph Conrad's "Victory." The story takes place, partially, on the island of Java, where Dutch currency is used.

World conditions, however, have placed the future of the islands in a predicament. And, unwilling to have the customary "guilders" outlawed by the time the picture is released, Cromwell invented a few words designating types of coins in transactions in the picture.

Jilted Character

Judy's Grandfather

Grandfather of Judy Garland is portrayed by Charles Winninger in "Little Nellie Kelly."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Aug. 4.

Tim Holt, just 22, is the only son of a Western star who carries on the tradition of his father, Jack. He's a typical American boy, married two years ago to a cute little trick who hadn't graduated from U. C. L. A. They bought 15 acres in the valley and put up a four-room house, and when the baby came along, Tim built on a bedroom and bath himself. All he had to send for was the plumber. He didn't have a union card for plumbing.

HOPPER

He bends backward trying not to cash in on his father's name, which is rather refreshing in this day and age. He searched the country over for a horse, which he found three doors from his own place. It's a copper sorrel named "Duke," and follows Tim around like a puppydog. And if things go as well as they have been, Duke will end up as famous as Tom Mix's Tony. Tim came across Duke when he went over to sign up his neighbor on a civic matter which concerned them all.

Tim leaves soon for four weeks in Utah, on RKO's "Wagon Train." He's such a nice, wholesome American kid—I thought you'd like to hear about him.

If you're near enough, take a gander at the third finger, left hand of Babs Hutton, and you'll see a beautiful new sparkler put there by Cary Grant. The other two she's worn in years gone by are filed carefully away in her memory box.

When a well-known producer tried to have one of his stories passed by the Hays office, he didn't get very far. You see, the story was about two lovers who didn't marry or suffer for their sins. The producer finally said to the Hays representative, "Did you see 'The Baker's Wife?'" Answer was, "No—we're not supposed to look at it. It violates every section of our code."

When I asked Fred Allen what "Love Thy Neighbor" was all about, he said, "I don't know—it's all in writer Bill Morrow's head, and we'll have to hire a phrenologist to get it out of there. Just look at him over there—doesn't he look like the first grave digger?"

Our stars thought they had sparklers till they got a squint at Mrs. Marcus Daly's diamond necklace. She stops everything I've ever seen—and I once paid a shilling to look at the crown jewels!

If the Duke and Duchess of Windsor ever visit Hollywood, they'll make their headquarters at the Brown ranch. Clarence invited him the day he abdicated, got a wonderful letter of acceptance. When it was definitely set that the Duke would soak sponges at the Bahamas, Clarence renewed his invitation, with another charming answer saying, "If and when we come to Hollywood, we'll certainly visit you." Now what that would do to our Hollywood hostesses would furnish enough material for a whole book, since Mrs. Brown (Alice Joyce) is not a "Hollywood" hostess. She entertains only the people she likes.

Well, well! Twentieth Century-Fox will huddle in Kansas City in about three weeks, with exhibitors flying from the East, West, North, and South at studio expense. When they're assembled, they'll look at a sneak preview of "Brigham Young," after which they'll sit down in a sealed room and tell Mr. Zanuck what's wrong with it. If the complaints aren't too drastic, they'll bring the ideas back to Hollywood, re-shoot some scenes before showing it to the press. Only after that will the people whose opinion really counts, and who pay to see the picture, get a whack at it!

While Metro is busy dusting off some old pictures, I'm wondering why they don't take a look at "When Ladies Meet," which was made about eight years ago. I believe Leon Gordon wrote the screenplay. It was a knockout, and starred Bob Montgomery, Myrna Loy, Ann Harding, and Frank Morgan. What a set-up for new discovery, John Shelton, and Lana Turner. I'm still getting letters asking for pictures of that beautiful barn they transformed into a country home in that picture.

Here's an old one but I've never heard it before. A friend of the late Bill Mizner was married to a very wealthy woman who had some priceless paintings. When the husband was zero-minus in funds one day, he cut a painting out of its frame and took it to a pawnshop. It happened to be "The Last Supper." The pawnkeeper looked it over and said, "How much do you reckon it's worth?" Said the pawner, "Well, I reckoned it would bring $10 a plate." It did!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 4.—Taking as our topics today:

Pro football—Big, broad-shouldered fellows are on the move throughout the Nation this week and a sports fan with half an eye can recognize 'em as the football pros heading for training camps. Professional football has barged right into August while big league baseball owners stew at the intrusion.

POVICH

Two years ago Clark Griffith emitted an anguished howl at the August beginning of professional football. August and September, he claimed, was baseball weather. The football pros didn't have any right to start claiming space on the sports pages so consarned early.

"I won't let 'em play in my park until after the baseball season ends," shouted Griffith, but the next season, the Washington Redskins played two September games in Griffiths Stadium. The $22,000 he received from the football pros in stadium rental sort of changed his viewpoint. This year, again, the Redskins will play two September games at Griffith Stadium. One reason: Pro football paid Griffith more than $25,000 in gate percentages in 1939.

But rich Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Tigers, is unrelenting. He doesn't want pro football in his park at any price. With the Lions a big drawing card and Briggs Stadium having a seating capacity of 53,000 Mr. Briggs is forgetting $45,000 that would accrue for park rental. Rich man Briggs is unimpressed by that sum, and pro football in Detroit must struggle along at the University of Detroit Stadium which seats only 22,000.

Into the various pro football training camps this month will move the outstanding college stars of 1939, claimed by the pros in the draft. But all of the drafted stars won't be there. The Redskins' first four choices, for example, aren't going to report. They are Ed Boell, N. Y. U. fullback; B. J. Banker, Tulane halfback; Bill Kirchem, Tulane tackle, and Joe Boyd, Texas A. and M. tackle. Pro football, for all its popularity, still doesn't pay the kind of wages that will cause college graduates to give up what they consider good jobs.

Tigers Lead League—Back in early June, the Tigers discovered that the American League this year was not so hot and that they could win the pennant. Manager Del Baker's club was in third place then and not very close to the lead, but the Tiger manager told Owner Briggs that he thought he could get his club to the top with a fair share of the breaks.

What did Baker need, Briggs asked, and he got a quick answer. "A third baseman and one more pitcher." It was just before the June 15 deadline on trades, and Briggs was prepared to make a bold stroke. What team did Baker think he could get the players from? "Washington," said Baker. The pitcher he wanted was Dutch Leonard, and the third baseman was Buddy Lewis.

Thus it was that a few hours before the trading deadline, Detroit emissaries went to Clark Griffith with a staggering offer. Two Detroit players (whose names we are not at liberty to reveal) and $150,000 in cash for Leonard and Lewis, was the offer made by the Tigers to Griffith.

For Griffith, it would have been a profitable deal, but he turned it down. Why? Because, firstly, the Washington team itself was in a long slump and secondly, Griffith did not choose to outrage Washington fans by selling the only pitcher who was winning ball games for his club. For Griffith it was bad business, but paradoxically, good judgment. The $150,000 wouldn't cover the loss of good-will.

Balked in that plan, the Tigers moved into the lead nevertheless. If they win their third pennant since 1934, they will have won it with the worst of their three pennant winning teams, because thats the kind of a league they are in, and the Tigers knew it last June.

Baseball Suicide—The death of Cincinnati Catcher Willie Hershberger in a Boston hotel recalls not merely the suicide attempt of a White Sox outfielder in 1927, but a classic story among baseball reporters.

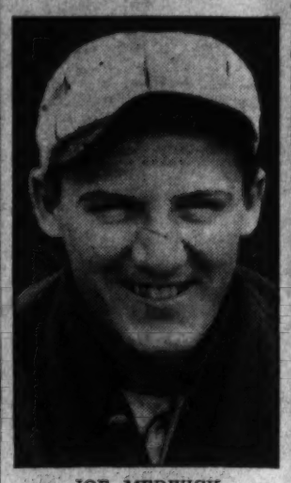
The news that Johnny Mostil had slashed his wrists in a Shreveport hotel struck the White Sox training camp like a lightning bolt. Baseball writers, hurriedly filing their stories, bethought themselves of a colleague who had been inebriated for a week. They sought him out, told him the facts, and assured him they would write his story as usual.

"Nothing, hie, doing," was his answer. "When the world's greatest centerfielder, hix, lies at the point of death, I am sending the story myself, boys. I want this story to do justice to the world's greatest centerfielder."

Whereupon he wrote his story, something like this. "The world's greatest centerfielder lies tonight at the point of death in a Shreveport Hospital. The world's greatest centerfielder slashed his wrists today in his room at the White Sox's hotel. His teammates found the world's greatest centerfielder suffering from loss of blood . . ." The story went on for 2,000 words.

Later in the day, the reporter got a wire from his boss. "Great story and you made it for deadline, but who is world's greatest centerfielder? Please rush name."

Week's Oddity: Ducky Benched As Bat Balks



JOE MEDWICK

Dodgers Rest Slugger Bought for $125,000; Wasdell Supplants Him

Brooklyn, Aug. 4.—Ducky Medwick, the $200,000 investment the Dodgers bought from the St. Louis Cardinals this year in the hope he'd supply a pennant-winning batting punch, was benched today for weak hitting.

He collected a single in the first game of today's doubleheader against the Cubs—his first hit in 14 times at bat. The Cubs took the game 11-2. In the nightcap, Duckey saw action from the dugout, while Jimmy Wasdell, a converted first-sacker, went into the Dodger outfield. Medwick came up in the ninth inning as a pinch-hitter—and was an easy out.

The Carteret, N. J., slugger was batting .302 when the Dodgers gave the Cards some $125,000 in cash and four players for him back on June 12. On June 18, re was "beaned" in a game with the Cards, and, although he was back in the game in four days, he hasn't hit with any consistency since, his mark dropping to .286.

Manager Leo Durocher could not be reached tonight for a statement as to how long the outfielder would be on the bench. Larry MacPhail the club president said he "didn't know" whether Duckey would be started in tomorrow night's game against the Giants.

Indians Cut Tiger Lead To Half Game

42,000 See Young Fireballer Allow 5 Hits; Hurler Knocks In Run in Fifth

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 4.—Bob Feller pitched and hit the Cleveland Indians to within half a game of the pace-setting Detroit Tigers today by trouncing the New York Yankees, 3 to 1, before 42,407 fans.

But the Iowa fireballer hit a new strikeout low for his major league career by fanning only one invader. The lone strikeout was Feller mound opponent, Charley (Red) Ruffing, who allowed ten hits. The Tribe hurler walked five men.

Rapid Robert gave the waning world champions five scattered hits in taking his eighteenth of the season. Two of these gave the Yankees' their marker in the second. The score resulted from Charley Keller's single, Joe Gordon's baseline bunt, Bill Dickey's sacrifice and Babe Dahlgren's fielder's choice, on which Keller romped home.

The Tribe knotted the count at one-all in the third on Ben Chapman's double and Roy Weatherly's single.

Feller's bat sent the Indians ahead in the fifth. With one down, Russ Peters singled, advanced on Rollie Hemsley's one-base blow and scored as Feller singled to center. Hemsley tried to score on Chapman's fly, but was out as he slid into Dickey. The Yankees' ace backstop was seriously spiked in the left foot. Several stitches were required to close the wound, and Dickey was ordered to return to New York.

Lou Boundreau tallied Cleveland's third score in the sixth. He singled, stole second and came in on Keltner's safety to left.

The victory gave Cleveland the series, two out of three, and enabled them to gain a full game on the Tigers, who tumbled before the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 3.

Griffs Score, 4-3 and 1-0 In Twin Bill

First Goes 10 Frames; Masterson Aids Dutch; Chase Unravels Fine 3-Hit Job in Second

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Brace yourselves for the news today, folks. It's not bad, just a bit startling. The Nats won a double-header, honest. They were wonderful. They licked the White Sox, 4 to 3, in a ten-inning first game, and then they beat 'em all over again in the second. The score of that one was classical. It was 1 to 0.

Your Nats had the pitching today. They really had it. Dutch Leonard won that opener in a knuckle-ball duel with ancient Ted Lyons, doing a nine-hit job of it. But the pitching masterpiece of the day was reserved for that second game. That's where Ken Chase came in. You ought to have seen him hold the White Sox to three hits and shut 'em out.

The proceedings were a horrible blow to the White Sox and the 15,866 customers, who had begun to vision the Sox as pennant threats with their late-season splurge. Going into the twin bill today, Jimmy Dykes' club had won 15 of its last 17 games.

Chase Is Superb

Chase was superb in beating out Johnny Rigney in the second game. He didn't allow anything more than a single—and only one of those in the last seven innings. But Leonard had to struggle for his victory over Ted Lyons. In fact, he wasn't there at the finish. Young Walter Masterson had to help him over a tenth-inning hump.

The White Sox tied the score at 3-3 in the ninth inning of that first game when Taft Wright, the old Nat, pumped a home run into the upper deck of rightfield, but the Nats got the ball game back in the first extra inning, thanks chiefly to Cecil Travis.

A cheap double by Buddy Lewis with one out in the tenth paved the way for Lyons' defeat. Lewis' ball was a high pop fly that Luke Appling failed to reach. Lyons passed Gerald Walker and then along came Travis with a line drive double against the right center wall and two runs scored. Walker was out at the plate momentarily, but Catcher Mike Thresh dropped the throw from the outfield with the help of Walker's well-directed kick at his wrists.

Sox Have Tying Run On

The White Sox came back with a run and had the tying run on base in that tenth, Leonard was in trouble when Kreevich led off with a

Guldahl's Great Rally Wins Milwaukee Open

Ralph Breaks Down Bulla in Test of Nerves in Finals

By Steve Snider
United Press Sports Writer.

Milwaukee, Aug. 4.—Big Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, absent from the winner's circle in big money events since 1939, broke down high-strung Johnny Bulla in a grueling test of nerves today and won Milwaukee's first $5,000 open golf championship by two strokes.

Bulla, unattached Chicago professional, who set a new Professional Golfers Associaiton record of 197 for the first 54 holes, collapsed completely on his last nine and wound up in fourth place.

Guldahl, nerveless as ever, finished with 67, for a three-day total of 268, which clipped 16 strokes off the short par at North Hills Country Club.

Oliver Closes Fast

It was enough to check a great finish by Ed (Porky) Oliver, of Hornell, N. Y., who stood 50 yards off the seventy-second green needing to hole out for a tie—and missed by 5 feet. He shot a final round 68 for a 270. Sammy Snead, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., came on with a rush with a 65 and finished third with 271, while Bulla and Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., leading money winner of the season, collected 272's.

Jim Ferrier, husky Australian, won amateur honors for the third straight event, posting a total of 278. To his 141 of the first two days, Ferrier added a 69 and a 68 today. The round of 68 included a seven on the thirteenth hole.

Although Oliver's dramatic last shot almost upset the tournament,

Anderson as Good As 'In' for All-Star Coaching Berth

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Eddie Anderson, of Iowa, strengthened his hold on first place today in the nationwide football coaches' poll as final results poured in from all sections of the country.

The voting deadline is midnight tonight. Final results will be announced Wednesday.

The coach receiving the most points will qualify as head coach. The four other sectional leaders will assist him.

The latest tabulation:

Big Ten—Anderson, 3,404,068; Mal Elward, Purdue, 575,791.

East—Tad Wieman, Princeton, 643,698; James Crowley, Fordham, 527,509.

Midwest—Don Faurot, Missouri, 2,436,987; Frank Hood, Rockhurst College (Kansas City), 1,666,159.

Far West—Buck Shaw, Santa Clara, 702,869; James Phelan, Washington, 474,103.

South—Lowell Dawson, Tulane, 709,764; Harry Mehre, Mississippi, 606,929.

287 Wins Midwest Open

Kankakee, Ill., Aug. 4 (AP).—Johnn. Krutilla, Chicago amateur, won the midwest open golf tournament today with a 72-hole medal score of 287, five under par for the Hieland Country Club course.

Harry Todd Wins Broadmoor Golf

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 4 (INS).—Harry Todd, of Texas, today achieved a long-standing ambition when he won the Broadmoor Invitation golf meet by eclipsing Earle Berryhill, of Sapula, Okla., 6 and 4.

One of the largest galleries ever to witness a Broadmoor Invitational watched the Dallasite negotiate the 14-hole afternoon round in two under par, and shoot the 32 holes of play in the final round one above.

Todd, runner-up in the Western Amateur, ended the first 18 with a medal score of 73, while Berryhill made the turn in 72. The Texan took seven on No. 12 hole, accounting for his large medal, but superlative work with his putter kept him well out of danger.

Simon Atlas Defeats Capital City A. Z. A.

The Simon Atlas ten of the A. Z. A. defeated the Capital City ten of the A. Z. A., 11 to 9, yesterday on the Roosevelt High School diamond.

Sam Gendleman, former Tech High star, received credit for the victory. Capital City jumped into a seven-run lead in the first inning, but the Atlas boys came back with three in the fourth, six in the sixth inning and two in the seventh to clinch the game.

Rye Men's Section Goes Into 3d Round; Gil Hall Upset

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., and Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., the Nation's second-ranking man player and the top-ranking woman, turned in the outstanding performances of a dozen matches played today in the Eastern Grass Courts Tennis Championships.

Parker, in action for the second time, led the field into the third round with a 6—3, 6—2 victory over Bob Kerdasha, of Woodcliff, N. J. Parker won five games on his own service at love and yielded only a point in each of two others.

Miss Marble had as easy a time in winning her first round match from Gerry Mallory, of Tenafly, N. J., 6—2, 6—0.

The only other player to reach the third round was John Thackera, of New York, who yesterday eliminated the Chinese Davis Cup player, W. C. Choy, and today upset Gerard (Jeff) Podesta, of Montclair, N. J., former Princeton captain, 10—8, 8—6.

A more surprising upset was the defeat of J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., a veteran top-flight player, by Alex Carver, of Wynnewood, Pa., 6—4, 6—3.

Dodgers Split With Cubs in Homer Battles

Reese, Camilli Slug To Take Nightcap, 7-6; Chicago Wins 1st, 11-3

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 4.—Homers by Pewee Reese and Dolf Camilli today enabled Brooklyn to score a 7-to-6 11-inning verdict over Chicago in the second game of a doubleheader after the Cubs walloped the Dodgers, 11 to 3, in the opener.

Camilli's homer came in the final frame of the extra inning struggle, broke up the ball game and sent the 30,000 fervid Flatbushers who watched the games home happy.

In the ninth Reese planted one of Losing Pitcher Passeau's benders outside the park to tie up the battle. A four-run rally, sparked by Hank Lieber's homer, sent Chicago away to an early lead but the Dodgers came back to stage a similar uprising in the sixth. Curt Davis, the fourth Brooklyn heaver, was credited with the win.

The loss of the first game proved a doubly sad blow to the capacity crowd. Not only did the Durocher Darlings lose, but 39-year-old Freddie Fitzsimmons, the mainstay of the moundsmen, suffered his second setback of the year.

The Cubs turned back Fat Freddie early by smashing out five hits and three runs in the first. Vern Olsen, a rookie lefthander, was the win-

Grief-Stricken Over Suicide of Hershberger, Team Plays Listlessly

By International News Service

Boston, Aug. 4.—The Boston Bees and the Cincinnati Reds split a duoble-header today, the Bees taking the opener 5 to 3, and the Reds the second game, 12 to 9.

The Reds, grief-stricken over the suicide yesterday of Catcher Willard Herschberger, played as though in a daze with the exception of Frank McCormick whose big bat saved the second game for the Rhinelanders.

In the nightcap the Reds twice blew two-run leads, and once a one-run advantage, but McCormick kept them in the game and finally led them to victory by slamming four hits and personally batting in half of the Reds' dozen runs. The Boston pitchers, Tobin, Coffman and Strincevich, the loser, all looked

Alfred Vanderbilt, Whitney to Hold Yearling Sale

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Cornelius V. Whitney will offer 39 thoroughbreds in a joint auction sale at Vanderbilt's Sagamore Farm, Glyndon, Md., November 6, it was announced today.

They already have selected 32 yearlings, 18 bred in Maryland by Vanderbilt and 14 bred in Kentucky by Whitney for the sale, which will inaugurate the auctions held by the Maryland Horse Breeders Association. In addition Whitney will offer seven broodmares in foal to such sires as Peace Chance, Questionnaire and Firethorn.

The yearlings to be sold include the get of Discovery, Equipoise, Peace Chance, Identify and Crack Brigade.

15 Players Signed By New Pro Club

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Long Island Indians, new member of the American Pro Football Association, already have 15 players under contract, Coach Chuck McGuinness announced today. They expect to have 30 on hand when practice begins three weeks from now.

Latest to sign were two ends, Frank (Bucko) Bukowski, of Nanticoke, Pa., a Villanova product, and Joe (Cowboy) Byrnes, of Sand Springs, Okla., who played last season for Union City, and Bill Pottast, halfback from Valley City (N. Dak.) Teachers College.

Sioux Indian Tribe Honors Charley Malone

Star End Is Made Member in Good Standing of Tribe

By Al Hailey
A Staff Correspondent

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 5.—En Route to Spokane, Wash., With the Red Skins). Redskin met Redskin here today long enough to swap a few "ughs" that converted Charley Malone, of the the paleface 'Skins, into "Chief Flying Thunder" and to permit a brief probe into the contract troubles with Frank Filchock, who refused to join the club in Chicago last night.

Malone, star end and veteran of six seasons with the football Redskins, was made a member in good standing of a tribe of Sioux Indians, who came down from their Standing Rock reservation to conduct the ceremony before the citizenry and 15 carloads of tourists.

Charley Decked Out.

With the visiting aboriginees doing an Indian version of La Conga around himself and Malone, Chief Iron Horse bedecked Charley's cranium with a headdress and presented a tomohawk to the towering lineman.

Meanwhile, efforts of General Manager Jack Espey to check up by telegraph on the status of Filchock were fruitless.

Espey early this morning notified Coach Ray Flaherty in the Spokane training quarters of Filchock's failure to report in Chicago with eight other players last night.

In answer to the regular quarter-back's demands for more pay, Espey has announced that the final offer already has been made and that Filchok will be fined for every day late. The Skins arrive in Spokane tomorrow night and work starts Tuesday morning.

Teammates Warned

Filchock's failure to join the club in the Windy City threw a small pall over the squad of 19 rushing out to join the main body in Spokane.

Frank Filchok Still 'Out of Fold' as Redskins Near Coast

"It certainly would be a bad thing if Frank doesn't play with us this season," a close friend of Filchock said. "He's one of the best quarterbacks I ever have seen for pulling the unexpected and doing it successfully.

"There's something funny about this whole business. I think Frankie has a sort of persecution complex. If he would come in and talk to Flaherty or Marshall I believe they'd be glad to give him what he asks, or at least reach a compromise."

Filchock, who is now playing baseball in the Kitty League at Fulton, Ky., led the National Football League in passing last season, and one of his pieces of "take a chance" field generalship led to the lognest pass completion of the year. It was Filchock to Andy Farkas, on the Redskins' 1-yard line, and netted 99 yards for a touchdown in the game with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Espey is puzzled by Filchock's silence and is pinning high hopes on the fact that he might be planning to get directly in touch with Flaherty in Spokane to iron out the contract squabble.

Henry Banks Wins 200-Mi. Auto Race

Langhorne, Pa. Aug. 4 (AP).—Speeding around Langhorne's mile oval track at an average speed of 69.36 miles per hour, 27-year-old Henry Banks, of Royal Oak, Mich., won the 200-mile stock car auto race before 37,842 fans today.

Banks, making only three pit stops, trailed until the halfway mark, then shot his Buick coupe into the lead to win in the record time of 2 hours, 53 minutes and 15 seconds, this was 10 minutes less than the time recorded by Mark Light, of Lebanon, Pa., in capturing last year's race.

Big Bill France, of Daytona Beach, Fla., finished second, nearly 2½ miles behind Banks. Adam Ashbaugh, Dayton, O., was third, Al Montgomery, Richmond, Va., fourth and Walter Keiper, Trenton, N. J., fifth.

Record Allison Tuna, 193 Pounds, Caught by Angler

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 4 (AP).—James M. McCready, of Sewickley, Pa., claimed a new Atlantic coastal record today for Allison tuna when he caught a huge specimen that was officially weighed on tested scales at 193½ pounds.

The former record for Allison tuna was a 170-pounder taken in Florida waters in 1936 by Dan Stebbins, of Atlantic City, N. J.

McCready hooked his 5 foot, 11-inch tuna at 11:47 a. m. today and brought it to gaff four hours later. The battling monster was hauled into the offshore cruiser Sampan, captained by Leo Droughton, at 4 p. m.

Fauquier-Loudoun Bows to Md. Four

Middleburg, Va., Aug. 4 (AP).—The Maryland Polo Club defeated the Fauquier-Loudoun team 8 to 3 here today, avenging a loss at the hands of the Virginians earlier in the season.

A good attendance turned out at Goose Creek Field for the match.

Bosox Series Aids Tigers to Boost Game Attendance

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 4.—It pays to be a winner.

Under other circumstances the Detroit Tigers' attendance probably would be lagging behind 1939 in view of bad weather days and the fall from power of the New York Yankees, but the front office announced today that the crowds totaled higher than last year.

So far this season the Tigers have drawn 705,543 fans at home, or 17,713 more than they did for the corresponding period last year.

For a long time the Yanks had been the big card here, but until the Boston Red Sox came to town for this last series the Tigers were 15,000 behind last year's attendance. That indicates how important the Yanks used to be to Tiger gates.

Mt. Rainier Defeats Riverdale Nine, 2 to 1

Mount Rainier baseball team nosed out Riverdale, 2 to 1, yesterday, on the Hyattsville High School diamond. Mike Mehalic gave up four hits while fanning seven for the winners.

Bill Schulz led the hitting for the Mounts. His eighth-inning triple opened the way to break a 1-1 deadlock and take the game.

ChampBlanks Two Rivals At Edgemoor

Channing and Judd Keep Pace as Play MovesInto 3d Round; Adair Nearly Upset

By Jack Munhall

For the second successive day favorites in the District Men's Open tennis championships at Edgemoor won with such ease that spectator attention focused on lesser lights struggling for a survival that probably is destined to be short-lived.

While Defending Champion Barney Welsh and the six of the other seven seeded stars who saw action advanced into the round of 16 with the collective loss of a set, such unranked players as Charley Channing, of University of Virginia, and Deane Judd, veteran public parks campaigner, won hard battles to keep pace. Welsh, apparently in top form, won two matches at love.

Of the ranking entries only seventh-seeded Ralph (Buddy) Adair experienced any difficulty. The stocky, inconsistent Edgemoor youngster had as much as he could comfortably handle in lanky Harry Bashore, however, and was one point from defeat before winning in three sets, 9—7, 1—6, 6—4.

Bashore Wins Second Easily

Bashore, owner of one of the fastest services in the local men's ranks and a pair of long legs that carry him over the court in great bounding leaps, had a set point on Adair in the first set. Had he been able to press his advantage then, chances are he would have emerged the victor, for he captured the second set very easily, giving Adair but one game. In the third and deciding stanza, Bashore wasted a good opportunity to forestall and perhaps avert defeat when he failed to hold his own vaunted service with the count at 4—5.

Channing, the husky, hard-hitting Cavalier, repelled Tom Wadden, runner-up for the Middle Atlantic junior title, 6—2, 6—3.

BARNEY WELSH

Smith in the first round, all but duplicated that marathon performance in outlasting Reggie Cooper in three fiercely-fought sets, 7—5, 3—6, 10—8.

Test in Store Today

Big tests for Judd and Channing come today when they will be pitted against top-seeded Welsh and third-seeded Hugh Lynch, respectively.

Yesterday the seeded players fared as follows:

Welsh (1) defeated Bill Buchanan, 6—0, 6—0, and Hy Ritzenberg, 6—0, 6—0. Davie Johnsen (2) defeated Joseph Kiernan, 6—2, 6—3. Lynch (3) idled, having gained the third round Saturday. C. Alphonso Smith (4) defeated Chuck Freer, 6—0, 6—1. Dick Murphy (5) defeated John Curran, 6—1, 6—2. Jimmy Farrin (6) defeated Don Glassie, 6—0, 6—3. Frank Shore (8) defeated Eli Gottlieb, 14—12, 6—1.

As can be gleaned from the scores, besides Adair, Shore alone of the favorites was at all pressed and he was extended only in the first set as Gottlieb, the Roosevelt High ace, shot his bolt in a reckless bid for an upset.

Welsh-Mitchell Win Two

In doubles, former champions Welsh and Dooly Mitchell jumped a round ahead of the field by winning two matches to gain the quarter-finals. The 1938 titleholders, seeded fourth, drew a first-round bye and then beat Hal Joffe and Carl Fontanini, 6-1, 6-3, and Hy Ritzenberg and John Smith, 6-3, 6-1.

Defending champions Lynch and Johnson moved into the third round without lifting a racquet on a default from Bill McCandlish and George Botts. Second-seeded Lieuts. Jim Farrin and Bill Howard beat Deane Judd and Hardy, 6-1, 6-0, and third-ranked C. Alphonse Smith and Murphy eliminated Channing and Cooper, 6-1, 6-0.

Singles only are on the schedule today, the winners to gain the quarter-finals. First match, at 3:30, brings together Shore and Charley Sturtevant. Farrin and winner of Harry Brinkerhoff-Ricky Willis match, which was interrupted yesterday after they split two sets, meet at 4:30 . Johnsen and Bill Breese, and Lynch and Channing play at 5.

Welsh Meets Judd

In the lower bracket Welsh engages Judd, and Murphy tackles Doyle Royel at 4, and Adair and Bill Howard get together about 5.

The Brinkerhoff-Willis match was halted when Willis pulled a muscle after winning the first set, 7-5, and dropping the second, 10-8.

Sergt. Jasper Post Loses In Series, 11-6

Cooley-McCullough Nine Takes Second Game of Legion Play

Successfully avenging a beating in the opening game of the American Legion Junior League championship playoff, Cooley-McCullough nine yesterday ground out an 11-6 victory over Sergt. Jasper nine to throw the series into a deadlock.

The most important inning of the game on the Ellipse was the first, in which C.-M. registered seven runs off four hits, three walks and as many Jasper errors.

The District title—and a trip to the Wilson, N. C., regional tournament which starts August 15—thus will go to the winner of tomorrow's third meeting of the teams at Walter Reed Hospital grounds.

After its disastrous start, Sergt. Jasper needed three innings to recover itself yesterday, and by that time its foe led, 9-0. Then for four innings in a row Jasper scored at least once, but the effort was futile.

Starting Pitcher Hill, of Jasper, lasted only until two of C.-M.'s seven runs had been scored in the first inning, then he gave over to Wilkerson. The latter finished out without too much difficulty. Hines took credit for the victory, allowing Jasper nine hits but fanning six.

Body of Hershberger Goes On the Road for Last Time

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 4.—The body of Willard M. Hershberger, suicide second-string catcher of the Cincinnati Reds, was shipped by train today to his widowed mother in Bisilia, Calif.

Hershberger, apparently depressed by his own recent playing and that of the National League leading Reds in the current Boston series, was found dead late yesterday afternoon in a downtown hotel, his jugular vein slashed by a razor. Medical Examiner Timothy Leary said he was a suicide.

The 29-year-old catcher, who was serving his third season with Cincinnati, had been moody for the past few days, club officials said, and had complained that he was sick.

While Hershberger had been batting over .300 this season, Manager Bill McKechnie said that the catcher appeared in low spirits after a recent game in New York because he had called the "wrong pitches."

McKechnie and other club officials said they became concerned about this mental state Friday night after the Reds dropped o dauble-header to the Bees. The Cincinnati manager talked with the young catcher for some time and after that, they said, he appeared in much better spirits.

Club officials last heard from Hershberger yesterday afternoon when they telephoned him at the hotel after he failed to appear at the park. He answered:

"I'm sick and can't play, but I'll come out right away anyway."

Abrams, Kid To Train in N.J. For Fight Here

Middleweight Foes Sent to Well-Known Outdoor Retreats

Realizing the importance of their ten-round assignment next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, Cocoa Kid, Puerto Rican colored scrapper, and Georgie Abrams, Washington middleweight contender, yesterday moved from their indoor rendezvous to famous New Jersey outdoor training camps.

Abrams, who ordinarily trains at Stillman's gym in New York, was ordered to Madame Beys' in Summit by manager Chris Dundee for seven days of vigorous drilling.

Simultaneously George Shepherd, who tells Cocoa Kid where his next fight is, and just what to do, dispatched the No. 1 welterweight challenger from his New Haven training quarters to the popular Pompton Lakes retreat.

This was the information relayed here yesterday by Match-maker Gabe Menendez, who still is in New York casting about for future talent, and who hopes to land something spectacular before he returns to town tomorrow.

Dundee and Shepherd, who wrangled for days over the matter of weights until it was agreed that Abrams could come in at 160, provided he posted a $500 weight forfeit with the District Boxing Commission, realize that this is no ordinary match—and that victory means much to the fighters. Shepherd especially is concerned over the weights, for Cocoa will be giving away some 12 pounds, and must be in superb condition by next Monday.

Abrams and Cocoa will be training 15 miles apart. They will be seeing each other for the first time when they weigh in next Monday at the commission.

At Madame Beys Abrams will train with Kenny Overlin, middleweight king recognized by New York; Tony Cisco, Frankie Cavanna, and Jimmy Webb—all of whom are stablemates.

White Sulphur Senior Golf Starts Today

Forrest McNeill Again Heads Linksmen of 2 Virginias in Meet

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 4.—Golfers—all more than 50—came into White Sulphur Springs from the two Virginias tonight to compete for the seniors golf title held by Forrest McNeill and for the team trophy, won seven times in 11 by the Old Dominion.

McNeill, a Clarksburg veteran, will begin the defense of his singles crown tomorrow, with the field as usual playing 18 holes on the opening day and the remaining part of the 36-hole medal play on Wednesday.

Officals expected more than 30 foursomes to start the group play on Tuesday.

For the last two meetings of the Virginia's Seniors Golf Association the singles title has been won by a West Virginian while the graying golfers of Virginia three times in a stretch have gone back with the team trophy.

Expected for the tournament, in addition to McNeill, former State amateur champion, on the West Virginia side were A. R. Beisel, of Huntington, 1938 individual winner; Dr. Gory Hogg, of Lewisburg; P. M. Snyder, of Mount Hope; H. H. Blac'burn, of Lewisburg, and J. A. Bloch, of Wheeling, among others.

Among those on the Virginia side were Ross Puette, of Richmond, 1937 individual champion; Col. M. S. Battle and James A. Beasley, of Roanoke; Nathan Bundy, of Norfolk; Spencer L. Carter, of Richmond, and J. T. Clark, of Bedford.

At elections this year, the association presidency, now held by Angus MacDonald, of Lewisburg, will pass to a Virginian. The annual banquet will be held tomorrow night.

Giants Win Opener, 3 to 2, Lose Nightcap

Cards Collect 14 Hits In Taking 6-3 Second Game; Young Homers

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 4.—The Cardinals punched out a 6-to-3 victory over New York in the second game of a double-header today after the Giants had copped the opener, 3 to 2.

St. Louis garnered 14 hits from a quartet of hurlers, including Bill Lohrman, the loser, in the afterpiece. A three-run uprising in the first gave the Red Birds an early advantage which they never relinquished. The Giants nicked Fidlin' Bill McGee for nine hits, including Babe Young's homer in the fifth with the bases vacant.

In the opener, Hal Schumacher bested Clyde Shoun in a pitchers' battle. Singles by Whitehead, Ott and Young and Danning's long fly in the seventh gave the Giants the tying and winning scores in the seventh.

Lefty Grove Halts Tigers For Sox, 7-3

Veteran Goes Route, Gives Eight Hits as Foxx Belts His 24th

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 4.—Old Lefty Grove and the Boston Red Sox checked the Detroit Tigers in their dash for the American League flag today, 7 to 3, with the ancient southpaw the master of the Bengals just as he has been for 16 years.

The Sox victory, achieved partly because young Hal Newhouser left most of his stuff in the locker room, cut the Tiger lead to a half game in view of Cleveland's triumph over New York and marked Grove's fifty-ninth conquest of Detroit during his long term in the majors. Detroit has beaten him only 16 times.

Two Booming Drives

Two booming drives—Jimmy Foxx hitting his twenty-fourth homer of the year and Ted Williams delivering a bases-loaded triple—paced the Red Sox attack and meantime the Tigers obliged the visitors generously with a series of costly misplays in the infield.

Foxx dropped one in the leftfield stands in the second and Williams, Lou Finney and Grove rapped out singles afterward for two more runs, and the Sox led to the finish. Hank Greenberg smashed his twenty-first four-bagger in the third with Charley Gehringer on from a walk.

Working deliberately, with plenty of time between pitches, Grove occasionally smoked one through and blanked the Tigers until Gehringer doubled and Rudy York singled in the eighth. The Tigers got eight hits, same as Boston, but the enemy never cooperated as did Detroit.

Cramer Hits Single

In the fifth Roy Cramer singled, Dick Bartell muffed Joe Cronin's grounder with a double play lined up, and Foxx walked to fill the bases. The gangling Williams then smote one off the centerfield wall 410 feet distant for three bases, driving Newhouser to the showers.

Errors by Gehringer and Bartell on rollers from Foxx and Williams and Relief Pitcher Tom Seats' wild pitch let in the last Sox run in the ninth. With the victory the Sox split the four-game series. It was Grove's sixth win against two defeats.

Frederick Beats Indianhead, 5 to 3

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Aug. 4.—The Frederick Hustlers defeated the Indianhead Athletic Club, 5-3, here today to avenge two lickings at the hands of the visitors last season. Arthur Hauver pitched shutout ball until the ninth when Indianhead rallied for three runs on singles by Simmons and Jenkins, Heise's double, an infield out, and an error. The game was marked by brilliant fielding by both clubs.

Browns Trip A's Twice, 5-4 and 6-4

Siebert's Wild Throw Spoils Athletics' Hope Of Split in Finale

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—The St. Louis Browns took out some insurance against an immediate cellar abode today by sweeping a doubleheader with the tail-end Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 4 and 6 to 4.

Dick Siebert's wild throw on an attempted force play in the fifth inning of the nightcap dashed the A's hopes for an even break, lettting in three runs which gave the Browns a lead they never relinquished, although they were outhit, 10 to 8.

Washington Amateur Golfers Defeat Baltimore, 12½ to 11½

D. C.'s Final Point Scored by Fuchs

Roger Peacock, Out in 31, Defeats Spencer Overton Easily; Billy Shea Rallies to Score Over Eddie Johnston

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Towson, Md., Aug. 4.—Washington's all-star golf team, weakened by the absence of six of its best players, staggered to a 12½-to-11½ victory over Baltimore in the third renewal of the intercity series here today over the Terra Mariae course. It was the District's third consecutive triumph.

Heroes in the District's narrow victory were a dime a dozen, but the star shotmaker of the day was Roger Peacock, Indian Spring's simon-pure ace, who played the first nine in four under par 31 and handed Middle Atlantic Champion Spencer Overton a 4-and-3 beating.

Rippy Easy Victor

His partner, Claude Rippy, routed Erford Barnes, 8 and 4, and Peacock and Rippy paired to repeat their Maryland State four-ball victory over Overton and Barnes by winning the best ball, 5 and 4. The match attracted a gallery of several hundred fans as the State four-ball final was a rather tainted match, and the gallery expected something extra.

Non-playing Capt. Volney Burnett left the team in charge of Louis Fuchs and the latter proved an able leader. With the District aggregation needing one point for victory, Fuchs brought the deciding marker home in the last foursome with a 2 and 1 triumph over Scotty Reid.

Faced with the problem of making a last minute switch due to the failure of George Molloy to put in an appearance, Fuchs switched Dick Melvin to another twosome and the latter replied with a 4 and 2 triumph over John J. Quinn, of Hillendale. He and Billy Houghton also won the best ball point. Dr. R. A. Kelley, D. C. vice president of the association, filled in for Molloy in the last bracket and lost to Al London, who played one of the best rounds of his career.

Shea Finish Good

Billy Shea, Congressional's young star put on the best finish of the day. Two down and three to play against State Intercollegiate Champion Eddie Johnston, of the host club, Shea finished par-birdie-par, a great birdie deuce on the tough seventeenth to win 1 up. His partner, Earl McAleer, a last-minute substitution by Burnett, defeated Bobby Jones, 3 and 2, for an important point.

George R. Miller, Columbia's improved golfer, won the last two holes from Edgar Lucas to gain an even split, while in the same foursome Bill Eager, the former State champ from Baltimore Country Club, held his jinx over District golfers by coming from behind to beat Bobby Brownell, 1-up.

Baltimore's best golf was played by the team of Nate Kaufman and Dr. Eddie Stinebert, host club champ, who blanked Indian Spring's Jerry Hart and Jock Olmsted. Kaufman routed Hart, 4 and 3, while Stinebert defeated Olmsted, 4 and 2. The winners posted a best ball 66.

Beaver Dam's team of Jim Gipe and Eddie Bean won 2½ of a possible 3 points, Gipe winning on the eighteenth over Dave Womer, while Bean and Jesse Dowling, jr., broke even, the Washingtonians winning the best ball.

Earle Skinker played spotty golf and was held even by John DeFord, jr. The latter's partner, Herbert Wagner, upset Frank White, and White and Skinker dropped the best ball point.

First Nine Even

At the end of the first nine holes it was evident the match would not be decided until the last foursome. The District led in nine matches at the halfway point, trailed in eight and seven were even. In fact, the match was so close that with nine to play there was only one hole's difference in the 32 players.

The host club committee put the pins in impossible places, and the normally easy course was made plenty tough. However Peacock's out nine of 31 made it look easy. Roger was even fours when the match ended on the back nine, and they quit.

Burnett had the toughest task of the amateurs that have captained the District aggregation. He was unable to take a day's leave himself and in addition M. Parker Nolan, Ralph Bogart, Martin McCarthy, Harry Pitt and Charley Malone were on the sidelines, for one reason or another. Otto Greiner was Baltimore's only star that was absent.

Greiner and Don O'Brien, of this city, were in New York, where the Baltimoreans advanced to the final round of the John G. Anderson Memorial tournament at Winged Foot. They defeated the Strafacis, Frank and Tommy, and met Willie Turnesa, former amateur champ, and Udo Reimbach in the finals. The latter duo defeated the former Georgetown U. golfers, Johnny Burke and Charles Pettijohn, in the semifinals.

Washington, 12½; Baltimore, 11½

Roger S. Peacock (Indian Spring) defeated Spencer S. Overton (Rolling road), 4 and 3; Claude Rippy (Indian Spring) defeated Erford Barnes (Rolling Road), 6 and 4. Best ball—Peacock and Rippy, Washington.

Earl McAleer (Congressional) defeated Robert E. Jones (Hillendale), 3 and 2; Billy Shea (Congressional) defeated Eddie Johnston (Terra Mariae), 1 up. Best ball—McAleer and Shea, Washington.

William Eager (Baltimore C. C.) defeated Bobby Brownell (Manor), 1 up; George F. Miller (Columbia) and Edgar Lucas (Baltimore C. C.) broke even. Best ball—Eager and Lucas, Baltimore.

Nathan H. Kaufman (Suburban) defeated Jerry Hart (Indian Spring), 4 and 3; Dr. Eddie Stinebert (Terra Mariae) defeated Jock Olmsted (Indian Spring), 1 up. Best ball—Kaufman and Stinebert, Baltimore.

Dick Melvin (Indian Spring) defeated John J. Quinn (Hillendale), 4 and 2; John MacKenzie (Hillendale) defeated Billy Houghton (Capital), 1 up. Best ball—Melvin and Houghton, Washington.

Herbert A. Wagner, jr. (Green Spring Valley) defeated Frank White (Capital), 1 up; Earle Skinker (Columbia) and John DeFord (Elkridge) broke even. Best ball—Wagner and DeFord, Baltimore.

Eddie Bean (Beaver Dam) and Jesse Dowlin, jr. (Hillendale) broke even; Jim Gipe (Beaver Dam) defeated David Womer (Sparrows Point), 1 up. Best ball—Bean and Gipe, Washington.

Louis Fuchs (Manor) defeated Scotty Reid (Sparrows Point), 2 and 1; Al London (Woodholme) defeated Dr. Robert A. Kelly (Congressional), 2 and 1. Best ball—London and Reid, Baltimore.

Cuban Stars Bow to Grays In Twin Bill

Washington Nine Takes First, 8-4; Captures Nightcap, 4 to 3

"Cum" Posey's Homestead Grays, representing Washington in the Negro National League, at Griffith Stadium yesterday annexed a double-header from the New York Cuban Stars, 8-4 and 4-3.

Easterling, in the opener, brought Watley home for the first count, in the third, with a grounder that Carrera barely managed to knock down. Watley's error, in the fourth, sent Linares across the plate to tie the game, 1-all.

This tie Carlisle promptly broke in the Grays' half-inning, hitting safely to short, stealing second, and coming home on the double play, Martinez to Linares, which sought to stretch into a triple play, his throw to Casey going wide at the plate.

The Stars took the lead in the sixth, scoring Carrera, Coimbre and Crespo. But again the Grays tied the count in their half inning, Gaston doubling to left, and dashing home on Jelli Jackson's smashing hit to center, while Jackson went on to third, and scored when Casey threw the ball past Heredia.

The Grays won in the seventh when Easterling tripled off the right-field wall, and scored on "Buck Leonard's hit to center, while Leonard and Benjamin crossed the plate on misplays by the Cuban third-sacker.

In the nightcap, the Cubans tied the count with the Grays, 2-all, in the fourth, but the home team went out in front on Carlisle's triple to center in the sixth, which drove Harris across the plate with the third run, Carlisle scoring later on Jackson's grounder to short.

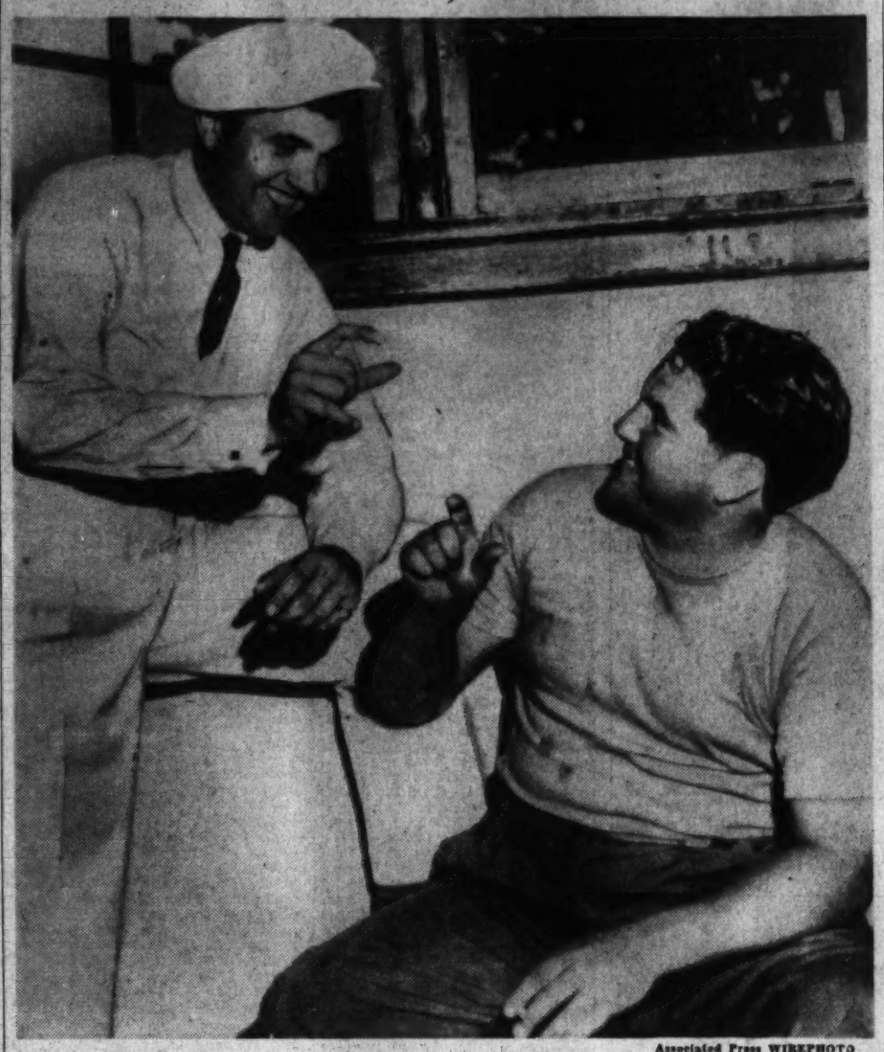
Bulla Sets All-Time Mark, but Loses at Milwaukee



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Johnny Bulla (left), of Chicago, established an all-time P. G. A. scoring record by carding 197 for his first 54 holes of the annual Open tournament at Milwaukee, but Ralph Guldahl won the event as Bulla cracked on the final 18. Shown with Bulla in the clubhouse is Ed Oliver, one of the early leaders, who finished second. Bulla tied for fourth with Ben Hogan

Guldahl Wins $5,000 Open At Milwaukee

Bulla Beaten After Setting 54-Hole Scoring Record

Nelson's Mark Falls

He still was four shots behind as Bulla posted his 54-hole total of 197, which bettered the P. G. A. record of 198 shared by Byron Nelson and Craig Wood.

Going out on the last round, Guldahl picked up a stroke but Bulla appeared to be coasting. Then it happened. Guldahl birdied the tenth and picked up a stroke. Bulla three-putted the twelfth and lost another. Guldahl caught him at the thirteenth where he just missed a 50-footer and settled for a birdie four.

Bulla three-putted the fifteenth and seventeenth and faded completely on the eighteenth with a bogy six after taking four shots to reach the green. That was the end of big John.

Guldahl's Rounds

Guldahl's rounds were 68-67-66-67, an average of four strokes off par for each.

Since his double victory in the United States Open, three straight Western Open titles and the Masters tournament in 1939, he nadn't fared well in Open championships.

Oliver, fresh from victory in the St. Paul Open and a second in the Chicago Open, was only a stroke behind Bulla as they opened today but his 70-68 weren't enough to stop Guldahl.

Jim Foulis, Hinsdale, Ill., 137-71-66—274.

Frank Moore, Detroit, 135-74-68—277.

E. J. Harrison, Little Rock, Ark., 140-68-68—277.

Jimmy Hines, Lakeville, N. Y., 141-69-68—278.

Dick Metz, Chicago, 142-69-70—281.

Enid and Mt. Pleasant Pace Baseball Tourney

Denver, Aug. 4 (AP).—The defending champion, Enid, Okla., Champlins and the Mount Pleasant, Tex., Cubs racked up their second triumphs in the Denver Post's twenty-fifth baseball tournament today.

The 1939 title winners, behind six-hit pitching by Lefthander George Milstead, thrashed the Ethiopian Clowns, a barnstorming Negro team from Miami, Fla., 9 to 1.

Mount Pleasant, runnerup in the National Semipro Tourney at Wichita last year, batted down its opponent's early lead to trim the Golden, Colo., Coors, 10 to 7. The defeats were the first for both losers.

126 Printcraft Golfers Begin 4-Day Tourney

Entries Fall Below Expectations for 17th National Championship at Beaver Dam; Schell Reports Lowest Practice Round, a 75

The four-day battle for the seventeenth annual Union Printcraft International Golf Association championship will be officially opened this morning at 7:30 a. m. when Joe Balestri, the District's main hope for the title, hits the first ball off the tee at Beaver Dam.

A field of 126, smaller than pre-tourney anticipations, will continue to play until the last threesome drives at 11:10 a. m. One 18-hole round a day is scheduled through Thursday.

The boys found the Lzandover layout a little tough in practice rounds yesterday and the only score reported was a 75 by Claude Schell, a tournament threat from Reading, Pa. Ed Gableman, the three-time champ from Cincinnati, was "around 75."

Defending Champion Eddie Rack, of McKeesport, Pa., tested the course, as did Claude Radabaugh, first winner of the Walter Hagen Trophy, from Detroit; E. A. Merkle, the District's 1935 champion; Fred Stringer, with Merkle, holder of the two-man team title, and Cliff Insmann, Detroit.

Balestri, eligible for the championship this year for the first time, is the logical favorite, as he has been preppinng for the event for some time and is the host club champion. Merkle is the Columbia Club titleholder.

Printers, bookbinders, mailers and photoengravers from any States are ready for the event, first held here in the history of the organization, third largest golf body in hte country.

Plummer, Newman Signed as Team for Rassle Innovation

Lou Plummer, Baltimore's meanie, and Ed Newman, New York ruffian, yesterday were booked by Promoter Turner as the team of villains to participate in the two-man team match at Turner's Arena Thursday night on the wrestling card featuring the Golden Terror and Warren Bockwinkle.

With two-man team matches to be introduced locally for the first time, Promoter Turner is leaving no stone unturned to select two first-rate teams. A couple of scientific grapplers will make up the opposing team, Turner stated.

Plummer wrestled last week, and was disqualified for cracking the referee in a bout with Frank Sexton. Newman caused a mess of trouble in the battle royal before losing in the finals to Bockwinkle.

The two-man team matches will be two out of three falls.

Lynchburg Wins In 10 Innings, 12-10

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 4 (AP).—The Lynchburg Senators downed Staunton, 12 to 10, here this afternoon in a 10-inning game that lasted more than three hours.

Two errors led to all the Staunton runs and forced the game into extra innings. Both misplays, coming after two were out, were followed by President rallies which netted six runs in the fourth and four runs in the ninth to tie the score.

Lynchburg batted first, as the game was a transfer from Staunton.

Record Half-Mile Season Moves to Cumberland Tomorrow

Stall Room Track's One Big Problem

8-Race Programs To Include Daily Steeplechase; New Clubhouse Erected

By Walter Haight

Up where the Potomac River is a yearling, horse racing will be big business starting tomorrow. The Cumberland track, dubbed "Little Santa Anita" because of its mountain background, will feel the pounding of hoofs and hear the rustle of greenbacks for 10 days. The meeting, under the auspices of the Cumberland Fair Association, promises to be a record one. Growing interest in minor track racing, which set new marks for attendance and wagering at Charles Town, Hagerstown and Bel Air, promises to carry Cumberland far and beyond anything the busy city has seen as yet in a turf way.

A check with van and railroad men at Bel Air last Saturday revealed that more than 200 horses already had been unloaded at the oval and that by nightfall today another 500 will have been transferred from Bel Air. About the only problem faced by Cumberland officials is stabling the horses. Stall room ran out early last week. The problem has been solved to some extent by the erection of a dozen tents, equipped with temporary stalls.

Plant Is Ready

General Manager Harry A. Manley, a little man who has a big smile even on a rainy Saturday, reports that the plant is spic and span. He says the clubhouse, destroyed by fire last winter, has been rebuilt and other buildings have been remodeled. The running surface is at top shape. The track, incidentally, is considered the most safe of Mayland's smaller ovals. Although only a half-mile, the track is wider than Pimlico.

As at Bel Air, steeplechase racing will be a part of each program. The jumping course has been remodeled and virtually the same horses, from Virginia and Maryland, prominent at Bel Air, will compete. No steeplechase purse will be less than $500 which has been a lure for the better jumpers.

The line-up of officials practically is the same as conducted racing at Hagerstown and Bel Air. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan is in charge of arranging the program and has turned out a promising book for the meeting.

60 Riders Available

Sixty riders, about the same as the line-up at Bel Air, will be available for flat and steeplechase work. Sammy Palumbo, one of America's first twenty jockeys in winning mounts, will ride at the meeting. He has piloted more than 70 winners and hopes to make it 100 before the close of the small track season. The Brooklyn, N. Y., boy was a bit under the weather at Bel Air but has shown signs of returning to best form.

The Puett starting gate, with Starter Ira Gregory pressing the button, will be used at the session. This equipment worked to perfection at the other two Maryland tracks.

Following the two weeks of racing here, the show will move right into Washington's lap at Marlboro. Following the Prince Georges County session, the smaller tracks will make their final stand at Timonium before Havre De Grace brings the bangtails to the big time.

Leonard Takes Opener, 4-3; Chase Allows 3 Hits in 1-0 Victory

double to left and Kuhel scored him with a single. Nobody was out, and Manager Harris hurriedly rushed Masterson into the ball game. The rookie did a magnificent job of it to hold his one-run lead. He struck out the dangerous Taft Wright and then caused Appling to hit a game-ending double-play grounder to Jimmie Pofahl.

Jake Early gave Chase the run that won the ball game for him. Jimmy Bloodworth led off the second inning by beating out a surprise bunt to Kennedy, and the run languished on first until two were out. Then Early slammed a long three-bagger against the scoreboard in right center and Chase had the 1-0 lead that he preserved to the finish.

The Nats accumulated only six hits off Rigney, but Chase was making his lone run stand up magnificently. He got out of trouble despite two White Sox hits in the second inning and the only blow he yielded during the rest of the game was Rigney's useless single in the fifth.

Chase had to bear down for his victory. The White Sox had the tying run on base in every inning after the fourth, chiefly because of the four walks Chase issued. In the sixth, the Sox had two runners on base when Pofahl made a wild throw to first, but Chase disposed of Appling on a short fly.

In the eighth the first White Sox to face him, Webb, reached base, but after he was sacrificed to second, Chase was superb. He struck out Joe Kuhel and Taft Wright in that emergency.

Jimmy Bloodworth helped Chase out of a situation in the ninth, after Appling walked with one out. He moved over toward second base, scooped up Tommy Turner's hard grounder, stepped on second and completed a double play with a swell throw to Sammy West.

Travis Stars in Field

In that first game, the Nats were wunn'erful, otherwise, than with their pitching. Cecil Travis elicited gasp after gasp from the 18,366 customers with his spectacular play around third base, and Gee Walker galloped into deep leftfield for two amazing one-hand catches that helped to win the ball game. Dutch Leonard has no complaint with his support today.

The lower end of the Nats' batting order belted Lyons loose from two runs in the second inning, with Jimmy Pofahl contributing the important blow of the proceedings. Travis drew a walk at the outset, and a big inning appeared in prospect when Bloodworth dumped a single to short right that moved Travis to second. But Appling started a double play on Myer's grounder and the rally sagged. Pofahl, however, rapped a long double against the leftfield wall to score Travis, and romped home himself a bit later when Rick Ferrell delivered a line-drive triple into center.

The ball game rocked along at those 2-0 figures until the seventh when the White Sox came up with a run. Travis helped Leonard over a hump in the fourth with two on base with a brilliant play on Rosenthal's hard smash. In the sixth, with one on and one out, Travis robbed Wright of a hit to turn the Sox back scoreless. The Sox filled the bases later in the inning, but Leonard disposed of Tresh on a soft liner to Myer.

Kennedy Opens With Single

Kennedy opened the seventh with a single and it evolved as the first Chicago run. He moved to second on Lyons' infield out, and Webb scored him with a single to center. Leonard halted the sox at that point by taking Kreevich's drive into the box and starting a double play.

One was out in the eighth when Leonard suddenly lost his 2-to-1 lead. He made the mistake of pitching a fast ball to Taft Wright and Wright lofted it into the rightfield upper deck for his fourth homer of the year, to the mad delight of the customers. The Sox had the winning run on base when Appling walked with one out and stole second with the help of a wild pitch, but Rosenthal and Fresh were easy outs.

Formation of Eastern Golf Body Planned

Association to Be Patterned After Western Tourney

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 4.—Plans for formation of an Eastern Golf Association, embracing all territory east of the Mississippi River, will be considered this week during the Eastern amateur championship at the Briar Hills Country Club.

The association is to be patterned after the Western, Southern, Trans-Mississippi and other major sectional bodies. Presidents of State associations will be invited to become members of the executive committee.

The new organization would conduct three championship tournaments, amateur, open and women's. The 1941 Eastern amateur already has been awarded to the Erie Downs Club, Fort Erie, Ont.

The 1940 Eastern tourney, an outgrowth of the Syracuse Yacht Club invitation event, is expected to attract a field of 200, including last year's winner, Bill Holt, of Syracuse, Willie Turnesa, Ray Billows, Dick Chapman and Johnny Burke, metropolitan district stars; Art Doering, of Chicago; Jim Ferriar, Australian champion; Neil White, Southern champion; Harry Haverstick, of Lancaster, Pa., runner up for the intercollegiate title; Bob Babbish and Tom Sheehan, of Detroit; Ellsworth Vines, the pro tennis star, and the Texans, Harry Todd, Don Schumacher and Jack Munger.

Horses to Watch At Cumberland

KAI-MIN—Two good tries and some excuses in recent efforts. Should win over this course.

SCARLET FLAME—Fit and ready. Needs only to get into action and will beat good ones.

KEN'S POP—Messed about at first turn in last Saturday's race. Wants only a share of racing luck.

STEPPING IN—Has plenty of speed and should be able to make sharp turns at this oval.

SEASONAL—Made move too soon in last. Wants a waiting ride and should take purse.

ALBERT D.—Failed to see action in seven tries at Belair and is a fit horse.

MARIYAH—Comes back after two-week rest and probably will be sharp at first asking.

Selections at Saratoga

Dear Al:

While Brother Manley and Brother Brennan are getting things ready for the opening of Cumberland tomorrow, I'm going to take a one-day flier at beautiful Saratoga, a track which didn't make as much money last Saturday as Bel Air. When I tagged Bel Air as an "amazing track," I didn't miss it by much. Betting on the final day of the meeting reached major track proportions and the estimated crowd of 12,000 was just about the largest jam ever seen at a minor Maryland track. But there's a feeling of jealousy in the air, and if Bel Air doesn't watch out, it is going to have to pay a big track tax. However, Bel Air officials probably would welcome that if they could rebuild the oval into a mile and get the 25 days of racing. The present track a 6-furlong affair, probably was planned with that in view. The change to a mile would only mean moving the backstretch out and lengthening the turns. The present stretch is of mile track proportions. Talked to Joseph A. Farrell, general manager of Marlboro and Bowie, last Saturday. He is embarrassed because somebody gave out the news that Marlboro will have a new road into the plant from the Crain highway. Farrell said: "I probably was misunderstood. I did say that we would like to have such a road. However, we have improved the road leading in from the town of Marlboro and have improved that bridge." When Apprentice Jockey R. Sisto was fined 25 for rough riding the other day, the boy did not have the money. The jockeys took up a collection and paid the fine. That was a real gesture of confidence in him, because Sisto was guilty of cutting over in front of the field and in doing so was endangering his fellow riders. Brother Cox tells me that the B. & O. will conduct race service from Washington to Cumberland at $3 for the round trip. My Dalmatian pup, Charles Town, went three-eighths of a mile with one of my new shoes in his mouth. I am thinking about leaving Clymene home and taking the dog to Cumberland.

BILL.

First race — Kingsem appears headed for favoritism in this steeplechase event. Appears capable of holding these safe and I'm forced to string along, regardless of short price. Golden Reel has schooled well and may be prominent. The Immortal II for the minor award.

Second race—Cleo Louise has been consistent this year and victory in a field of this sort is not beyond her power. I'm going to be there. Not Yet has front-running ability and will have to be caught. Old Friend could be the third one.

Third race—Merry Gesture needed that last. Should come back with a strong effort to down these. Rock Maker was good last year and may cause trouble in this company. Soldierette's early speed makes her a threat.

Fourth race—Blinking Owl has three strong races to her credit. Boasts speed and has closing ability. Could be the right one. Frontier Model won at the first asking and probably is the one to beat. Cute Trick has worked impressively.

Fifth race—In Charge was aiming a bit too high last out but ran a creditable race. Drops back in more suitable company and gets my call. One by One is making his first start of the season and has worked impressively. Sir Lancelot could be the third one.

Sixth race—Scylla won at a mile last out and downed good company. Gets the same distance and same weight today and I'm going to string along. Short Distance has been showing excellent form and will be close. Toddle On is an upset possibility.

Seventh race—Williamstown has been close or the winner in all recent starts. Takes off 4 pounds and seems best suited in a rather open affair. Stagefright and Us are in excellent condition and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Eighth race — Shambles' closing ability seems to fit nicely in this mile and a quarter. Needs only to have racing room in the late stages. Third Try is a fair sort and will be a threat. Tanganylka has come a long way since Charles Town days.

Best bet—Shambles.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 4.—The tragic death of Willard Hershberger may have been traceable to his morbid belief that he was responsible for a slump which is imperiling the lead of the Cincinnati Reds. The germ of his suicide could have been sown last Wednesday night at the Polo Grounds when Whitehead and Danning, of the Giants, hit home runs off pitches Hershberger called for—and wiped out a Cincinnati lead.

CONSIDINE

One of the Cincinnati players intimated over a Boston radio broadcast last Thursday night that the Reds probably would have staved off that sensational last-minute spurt of the Giants, if Ernie Lombardi, instead of Hershberger, had been behind the plate.

Hershberger caught the second game of the double header which the Bees took from the Reds on Friday. It was a tough 12-inning game, and Hershberger apparently called for the pitch which Ross, of the Bees, smacked out to win the game. Whether by instruction or coincidence, Hershberger was the last player to remain in the Reds' locker-room after that double header—the first double header Cincinnati has lost this year. When he emerged he came out with Bill McKechnie and the equally fatherly Hank Gowdy, the Reds coach.

The trio took a cab and went to a Boston hotel. Hershberger went directly to McKechnie's room and remained closeted with the manager for an hour and a half. Then he came downstairs and ate, loafed around the lobby awhile and later went to bed. Saturday morning he came into the dining room and found Lou Smith, of the Cincinnati Enquirer, eating alone. He joined Smith, and Smith noticed that he hardly ate.

"Say," Smith said, "You're not eating much for a guy who's going to catch today."

"It's enough for me," Hershberger said.

Paul Derringer was the last player who saw Hershberger. The catcher was sitting in the lobby early Saturday afternoon when Derringer came downstairs to turn in his key and start for the ball park. Derringer was somewhat surprised. He said, "come along in my cab," but Hershberger answered, "No, thanks. I'm waiting for a friend."

Derringer looked at the clock over the room clerk's head, and Hershberger added, "don't worry. I'll get there in time. I'll make four hits, too." Hershberger was scheduled to catch Derringer—who easily won the opening game of the day's doubleheader.

When Hershberger didn't show up, as game time approached, Gabe Paul, traveling secretary of the Reds phoned the hotel and got him on the phone. "Where the hell are you?" Paul asked. Hershberger replied that he wasn't feeling well enough to catch, but was coming out to the park anyway. Paul went back to the Reds bench with the news and several of the players are said to have grumbled about it. One said, "What's he so 'down' about? How about the rest of us?"

Hershberger had a dinner date Saturday night with Dan Cohen, a Cincinnati fan who was in Boston on a business trip. Cohen was in his seat near the Reds' dugout when Paul returned with the report that Hershberger was sick. When the game started and Hershberger didn't show up, Cohen left the park, went down town, and when Hershberger didn't answer his phone or the door, got into the room with the aid of a maid's pass-key and found the catcher on the bathroom floor.

The news of the tragedy reached the players during the third inning of the second game—which they lost, 5-2. The Reds, deeply shocked, did not score after the third. McKechnie, visibly touched, rushed downtown to the body.

Hershberger's private life was exemplary. He had little or no interest in girls, for he felt that he owed his attention and his income to his widowed mother, who is a school teacher. He had knocked in 26 runs this year, and was batting .285. Only two Cincinnati regulars, Frank McCormick and Lombardy, are hitting better than that. But his hitting never was a source of worry to Hershberger as much as his receiving. His pitchers, of course, were under no compunction to accept his signals. They could, and sometimes did, "shake him off" when they thought he was calling for a pitch which the batter would find easier to hit than another pitch. But, according to one of his teammates, Hershberger worried a lot over the tactical side of his catching.

Ironically, Hershberger's hobby was collecting rare and modern guns. He had more than 50 such weapons. And he ended his life with a razor.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

On the wings of a standout pitching effort, Ken Chase, the Nats' unpredictable southpaw, shoots far in the lead of other candidates for the August Man of The Month award on the basis of performances in yesterday's doubleheader with the Chisox.

To Chase, 20 points, because he shutout the Chisox on three hits in the nightcap, fanning five and showing plenty of courage in the clutches.

To Dutch Leonard, 8 points, because despite the fact he needed relief to subdue the Sox, 4-3, in the opener he pitched a creditable nine-hit game, holding the enemy scoreless for six innings.

To Jake Early, 7 points, because his single in the second inning of that second game, produced the only run, and because he fielded his position flawlessly, taking care of eight chances during the bill.

To Cecil Travis, 7 points, because he was a leading light for the Nats on offense and defense in both games, doubling twice to score one run and bat in one in the first game, and singling in the nightcap, while handling seven chances without error in the twin bill.

To Rick Ferrell, 2 points, because he made a single and a double and drove in one run in the first game and handled Dutch Leonard's difficult knuckler with efficiency.

To Walter Masterson, 2 points, because in a moment of danger in the tenth inning of the first game he came to Leonard's aid and retired the side on a strike out and a game-ending double play.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, 1 point, because he obtained a hit in each game, and helped Leonard out of a hole in the ninth of the opener with a spectacular play on Tommy Turner's hard grounder.

Webb Pitches No-Hit, No-Run Game for Uline

Big Buddy Webb, Tech High's 200-pounder mound ace, stalked into the sandlot hall of fame yesterday when he pitched a no-hit, no-run game for Uline Ice nine and defeated Naiman Photo, 2-0, in the junior section of the National City Sandlot League.

The game was called by Umpire Shade midway of the eighth inning due to a time limit. The score thus reverted back to the end of the seventh, and Webb was charged with only one man reaching first base. That was on an error by Firstbaseman Patton.

Webb's slab foe was Billy Fisher, Central High's stellar right-hander whom many observers called the finest young pitching prospect in Washington. Fisher was touched for nine safeties, all singles.

Action in Section A saw two of the four teams which ware tied for the lead bow out of title consideration. Packard-Washington took a 7-4 lacing at the hands of Miller Furniture, and D. G. S. was the victim of a stinging upset by Orange Disc, 6-5. The Discers scored all their runs in the seventh inning.

As a result, Miller took over the senior loop's top rung along with J. C. Flood, which came from seven runs behind to beat Marvin's Credit, 11-8. Hypsie Perlo delivered the telling blow, a double, in the seventh inning with two men on base. He later stole home to increase Flood's margin.

Klein Tavern, first half winner and defending league titlist, clung to its place just under the leaders by romping over Small Motors, 13-4.

In B Section the only game was a 4-4 deadlock between Capital Cafe and Plaza Tile. St. Francis Xavier was credited with a forfeit over Washington Home Improvement and Terminal Ice also won by default over Variety. The latter forfeit automatically dropped Variety from the league, it being the team's second of the season.

Slipping Riggs Unconcerned On Eve of Tournament at Rye

Despite Narrow Escape at Sea Bright and Loss At Southampton, Champ Doesn't Show Worry

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 4.—In this super-swanky setting, where everybody has a chauffeur and a golden sun tan, Bobby Riggs, the national tennis champion, seems very unconcerned about what almost happened to him at Sea Bright, what did happen at Southampton and what may happen in the Eastern grass courts tourney here.

If he is unconcerned, he stands alone. Everyone else is tremendously excited. For Riggs barely escaped defeat by Frank Kovacs, the Oakland oaf, in the finals at Sea Bright, and then lost to the lanky Californian in the semifinals at Southampton.

The prospect of a champion being beaten is just the sort of excitement tennis needs.

New Interest Needed

The nationals at Forest Hills in September, up to now, were looked upon as pretty dull business. That tournament, above all others, needs a good battle in the men's division to offset the certain march of Alice Marble through the women's ranks.

And now the tennis fathers have not one—but two—stars, both capable of knocking the duck-waddling Riggs off his throne.

First is Kovacs, who had Riggs at match point four times at Sea Bright, only to lose, and who walloped the champion decisively at Southampton.

Doesn't Fear Riggs

Then there is Don McNeill, the tough Oklahoman, who bested Kovacs easily at the Meadow Club finals Saturday and who is seeded second behind Bobby here.

Kovacs admits he has no fear of Riggs—and points to his two latest outings against him as proof. And McNeill says, "now don't say that I can beat Riggs—just say I think I can."

Either way, tennis gets a break. Riggs hasn't been a popular champion. The oldsters are particularly displeased with the manner in which Riggs fiddles around letting unknown after unknown take sets from him.

Kovacs Colorful

Kovacs, if nothing else, would be a colorful champion. The "magnificent screwball" has the ridiculous habit of throwing his racquet into the air when he's annoyed, of biting his racquet when he's mad, of heckling ball boys, of razzing the gallery and of obecting dramatically to the decisions of umpires.

McNeill would be popular, through in a quiet sort of way. Much more stable and solid, he never resorts to gags to get in the gallery's graces.

The crowds like Kovacs better, though. At Southampton while he was being torn apart by McNeill in straight sets the expensively clothed crowd greeted every whacky gesture with a polite laugh and a nice burst of applause.

Three 5-Mile Motorboat Races Won by Jacoby

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Aug. 4 (U.P.)—Fred Jacoby, of North Bergen, N. J., drove his speedy little outboard motorboat to three 5-mile victories today in the thirtieth annual regatta of the Saranac Lake Boat and Waterways Club.

Jacoby, recent winner of the Albany-to-New York outboard distance race, outdrove the field in the B, C and open classes, winning two heats in each class for a total point score of 2,296.

Only in the class A division did Jacoby meet a superior driver, Frank Desmond, of Short Hills, N. J., present intercollegiate champion, showed the way to Jacoby and other professional drivers in this smaller-motor class.

The midget champion, Don Whitfield, of Upper Montclair, N. J., made it three straight for New Jersey drivers when he scored victories in two heats at the 1 and 5 mile distances for the midget class.

Walsh and White House Pistolmen Victors

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 4.—The White House police pistol team, of Washington, D. C., and FBI Agent Walter Walsh, of Arlington, Va., shared honors as the fourth annual Cumberland Valley Pistol Championships were staged here today.

Paced by its captain, John Cash, the White House four-man team posted an aggregate of 1,084 in the group event to defeat National Capital Club, also of Washington, by eight points. Metropolitan Police team was third, two points back, and the Marksmanship Club was fourth.

Cash's 279 led individual scorers of the team. Second was Earl Reynolds with 270. Edgar Warden had 261 and Richard Hallion 234. In addition Cash captured first place in the masters division of individual firing with 283.

To Walsh went top honors in the grand aggregate firing, fourth and one of the most important events on the program. The Eastern smallbore champion had a three-match total of 750x800. Cash finished in second place only ten points behind.

Heaviest Taxes in 25 Years, Best Business In History Forecast by Babson in Final Half

Billions for Defense To Put 'Oomph' in Trade Upsurge

By Roger W. Babson
Written for The Washington Post

Business in the second half of this year should be very active in most lines—maybe the best final half in history. More real jobs, fatter pay envelopes, modestly higher farm income, bigger dividends than in the first half of 1940 or in the final six months of 1939 are assured. There will be no noticeable gain in living costs, but taxes will be the heaviest in a quarter century. The next few months will be a period of intense industrial activity as our mammoth defense program gets under way.

MR. BABSON

This defense program will put the "oomph" in the industrial boom ahead. If peace comes in Europe before the program gets going full blast, there will be a temporary halt in the upswing. The longer peace is postponed, however, the greater the possibility that business activity will break all previous records sometime in 1940 or 1941. Specifically, I estimate that business in the second half will run about 6 per cent above the same period of 1939, and also 6 per cent higher than in the first six months of this year.

Readers will recall that in my outlook for the first half of 1940 I predicted a gain of 10 to 15 per cent over the same months of 1939, but a downward trend from the high levels of January first. This gain was 11.5 per cent and business is 6 per cent under the New Year level. I also said that we would have either a boom or a crash (no half-way course) in the second half of the year. I felt that it was impossible at that time to say which it would be. Now, however, I predict for the balance of this year a real boom in most industries.

Pacesetter in this industrial expansion ahead will be the heavy industries. Steel operations are scheduled to reach a new peak for any six-month period on record. They are entering the second half at close to 90 per cent of capacity, the highest midsummer figure since 1929. Machine shops, metal foundries, airplane factories, shipyards, railway-equipment plants, have huge backlogs of orders. Only a shortage of skilled labor can prevent these industries from breaking all previous records.

The next few months may well see the railroads pull themselves out of the doldrums for the first time in ten years. Rail traffic is almost sure to reach new highs since the "big depression" set in. Railroad earnings will be the best since 1930 and there will be openings for thousands of railroad workers. The railroad revival may be short-lived, however. Electric power plants, textile mills, lumber camps, copper, lead and iron mines, truck factories, should all get "their cut" of expanding activity.

Home-builders should handle a fourth again as many "jobs" as in the late months of 1939. With factories frantically pushing expansion plans, many industrial contractors should see their business doubled. Building costs are expected to move upward, too, but less than 5 per cent. Real estate values and activity will improve noticeably, especially around shipyards and in other areas where the defense program is concentrated. Rents for factories, offices, and single houses may be a little firmer.

Naturally an industrial revival, such as is now in prospect, means more jobs and bigger pay rolls. I would not be surprised to see a million jobless people go back to work before snow flies! Wage rates will not be much higher—perhaps only 2 per cent on the average. The increase, furthermore, will be due to the boosting of rates in selected jobs rather than a general mark-up in wages. I do not foresee any serious gain in strikes. The public will not tolerate interference from any source in the defense job.

While things will look brighter for city workers, I do not believe that rural areas will fare so well. Only a moderate gain in prices of certain farm products is in prospect, despite the fourth smallest acreage since 1915. There is a big demand for foodstuffs in Europe, but we can do nothing about it as long as Britain's blockade remains unbroken. Dairy products, eggs, canned goods, cattle and hogs are among the farm products that ought to sell higher this fall. On the whole, prices may average around 3 per cent above a year ago with total cash farm income (including Government checks) registering a little bigger increase.

With the demand for goods sharply increased, with a major war on abroad, with the prospect for higher taxes, many people are worried over a runaway rise in living costs. I think such fears are unfounded for the present even though the basic trend of living costs is upward. Household bills are expected to move ahead only moderately—not much more than 3 per cent over the current level. The biggest mark-up will come in food. If taxes are figured into the living costs, the average will be somewhat higher because taxes are scheduled to hit the highest point in 25 years sometime in the near future.

Heavier pay rolls, higher farm income, bigger dividends, plus fixed living costs, should mean brisker retail sales. But trade in the final half of 1939 was good, so that the gain over last year's level may average less than 5 per cent for all lines—including groceries, novelties, furniture, automobiles, dry goods. Price-tags will continue their modest mark-ups of early 1940, but need be only 3 per cent above the corresponding months of 1939. Advertising volume should increase at least 5 per cent over the like period of last year.

Not only should wage-workers, businessmen and farmers be better off, but investors should see increased income. In fact, the next few months will see the largest dividend payments since 1937, providing Congress is reasonable about taxes. Right now stocks are the cheapest in years based on earnings. World-wide uncertainties, plus excess profits tax threats, have unnecessarily frightened investors. Hence, prices of certain stocks should move ahead as business activity and profits continue to gain. Selection will be the keynote with steels, rails, munitions, machinery and retail trade shares most favorably situated.

Interest rates will remain at very low levels; but high-grade long-term bonds should be weaker. Second-grade bonds—particularly rails—are temporarily in a strategic position because (1) the excess profits tax does not hit them and (2) rail traffic promises to reach a new post-1929 peak this fall. Roads serving the industrial area are the best bet. The Treasury has a job on its hands to underwrite the mammoth defense program without putting the Government bond market "on the spot."

Foreign trade should hold at current levels, well above a year ago. Loss of our Continental European markets should be offset by increased trade with South America and perhaps with the Far East. Great Britain will continue to be a big customer as long as the war lasts. No one knows what the outcome of the war in Europe will be. My belief is that it will either end very soon or will drag on for a long time. Whichever happens, I will not change my forecast on business for the next six months. This same statement applies regardless of who is elected President in November.

All in all, the remainder of 1940 promises to be the most active final half year in history. Our standard of living, however, will not increase because the defense program will not create more goods for us to divide. Only as more useful goods are produced are there more goods to divide—and only as there are more goods to divide does the standard of living increase. An entirely new tax program must be enacted. On this tax program largely rests the answer to the question: "Will the unproductive defense program give us some indirect benefit by eliminating certain unemployment, and by cutting down relief, thus cushioning the fall in the standard of living?"

However, the next few months will seem to be "good times," the closest we have come to prosperity since 1929. They will be crucial months—months in which the handling of our domestic political problems, of our foreign problems, of our South American relations, of our defense program, will dictate the future destiny of the United States. If we rise to the challenge—if we show intelligence, courage, self-sacrifice, and industry—we need fear no axis, no country, no man! Otherwise much of the coming prosperity will rest on unsound foundations. "Good times"—built on barrowed money or unproductive labor—always come back to roost!

Summarized Prospects

BUSINESS: Six per cent gain over first half 1940 and last half 1939.
TREND: Upward as defense program broadens.
FARMERS: Some products to move up moderately.
WORKERS: Big increase in jobs; wages steady; few strikes.
MERCHANTS: Five per cent increase in sales; prices up 2 per cent.
CONSUMERS: Foodstuffs to lead small living cost gain.
REALTORS: Rents higher; values and activity steady.
INVESTORS: Larger dividend checks; rail bonds up.
SUMMARY: Very active final half year.

Paraguay Votes On Constitution

Asuncion, Paraguay, Aug. 4 (AP).—Paraguay voted today on whether to accept the new constitution promulgated by President Felix Estigarribia.

A government spokesman predicted 160,000 of the 200,000 qualified voters would record their opinion and that it would be overwhelmingly in favor of the new charter.

Railroad Accident Hurts 24 in Kentucky

Central City, Ky., Aug. 4 (AP).—Twenty-four passengers were injured, one seriously, when the rear three cars of the "Louisiane" train of the Illinois Central Railroad were derailed today and overturned 4 miles north of here. Scores of other passengers were shaken up. The train was bound from New Orleans to Louisville.

Premier Maintains Sweden Will Keep Democratic Form

Stockholm, Aug. 4 (AP).—Prime Minister Hansson tonight rebuked those who expect a swing toward Fascism in Sweden as a result of closer economic relations with Germany.

"Our people have manifested their maturity for cooperation in democratic forms," Hansson said. "As to our internal life, there is no need of any orientation, but only for intensification and improvement of methods of work suitable to democratic life."

The prime minister said that only Swedes have proven their ability to make democracy work, and therefore they have no need to "run after foreign prototypes."

He said it appeared as though some people "expected new signals," and added that if they expected him to utter "demands for cutting loose from democratic institutions and running after foreign patrons without criticism, I cannot personally be of any service."

Racialism Caused War, Cardinal Says

London, Aug. 4 (AP).—(Via Radio). Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Archbishop of Westminster, declared today in a radio address to the United States that "worship to the idol of exclusive race superiority" is responsible "for turning Europe into a shambles."

The head of the Catholic Church in England spoke on the spiritual issues of the war at the request of religious groups in the United States. His was the first of four weekly addresses to America by prominent English clergymen.

U. S. Chemical Exports Up 55 Per Cent in Year

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that chemical exports in the first six months of this year were valued at $128,361,999, an increase of 55 per cent over the similar period of 1939.

While some of the warring nations purchased large quantities of American chemicals, the bulk of the increase was due to heavier demand from other areas, the department said.

Dr. Pritchard Dies

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 4 (AP).—Dr. Stuart Pritchard, 58, internationally known authority on tuberculosis and president and general director of the W. K. Kellogg Foundation for the last ten years, died tonight. He was a past president of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Greece Announces Neutrality Status

Athens, Greece, Aug. 4 (AP).—Premier John Metaxas tonight announced Greece "remains and will remain neutral," in order to contribute to the maintenance of peace in southeastern Europe.

While not an actual ally of Britain, Greece has received a guarantee of her independence from the British and has been regarded as a probable alley of the British should Italy attempt a drive toward the Dardanelles or the Aegean Sea.

Turkey, ally of Britain and guardian of the Dardanelles, also has announced her intention of staying out of the war unless attacked.

Roosevelt Calls For Religious, Race Tolerance

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt declared today that racial and religious discrimination imperils the fundamental rights of all Americans.

He sent this statement to the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights, observing its first anniversary:

"Freedom of conscience, as written into the Federal Constitution, through the wisdom and foresight of the fathes, has been a guarantee of peace and happiness during all our life as a Nation. Any selfish group which would discriminate against any of our fellow citizens because of race or religion would thereby endanger the fundamental rights of all.

"Only by common recognition of the principle that all men are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness can we attain the national unity which is essential to the maintenance of the democratic way of life and those cherished institutions which it fosters and encourgaes."

D. C. Boy Honored

David I. Bowie, 3302 Rittenhouse street northwest, has been awarded the Silver Tuxis Medal at the Culver Military Academy Summer School, the academy reported yesterday. The medal signifies the wearer is a distinguished cadet. Bowie is a petty officer, first class, in Company V, Naval Battalion.

Pinckney said he had "joined with other lifelong Democrats" in promoting a "mass meeting of all Texas Democrats opposed to the third term.

"We assure you a tremendous welcome when you come to Texas," Pinckney added.

When Junior hears what the life of a radio engineer is like, it's fairly probable that he'll give up all those ideas about wanting to be a locomotive engineer or a fireman. That is, if Junior is as bright as he should be.

Take the case of WJSV's engineer, Ed Laker. Ed has been assigned to do the pickup on the "We the People" broadcast tomorrow night. So for that five minutes of broadcasting, our Mr. Laker gets a ten-day vacation in the Caribbean Sea and what's more, gets paid for it.

The broadcast comes from the U. S. S. Wyoming en route to New York from Guantanamo Bay. After Secretary of the Navy Knox, in Washington, has talked on the program, it will be switched to the Wyoming where the midshipmen about whom Mr. Knox has been speaking will speak for themselves by short wave. In the five minutes, they'll put on a miniature radio drama by going through battle maneuvers, complete with gun salvos and everything.

Hard-working Mr. Laker left WJSV Thursday to fly to Miami, from there to take another plane for Cuba the following day. He boarded the Wyoming today just before it sailed for New York. It doesn't arrive in New York till the 10th.

Contract Bridge

Jacoby and E. N. Marcus, of Boston, had a stiff warm-up session for the Southern New England open-pair championship which they recently won.

James T. Gildea and M. B. Alfred, of Hartford, gave them a good fight, and today's hand shows a slam won by the Connecticut players in one of the rounds.

Alfred and Gildea reached the slam at spades with interference from both adversaries, and they made it easily. Marcus opened his fourth-best heart, which was trumped in dummy. Alfred drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and led a low club back to his hand. Jacoby, fearing Alfred might have a singleton jack of clubs, rushed up with his ace. He played another heart, but Alfred could claim the rest of the tricks without seeking the queen of diamonds. The king and queen of clubs would provide discards for two diamonds; the ace and king would take care of the other two, and there was still a trump in dummy to ruff the last losing heart.

Alfred made six spades, losing one club trick. Ossie's play made no difference, as Alfred could finesse or drop the diamond queen.

Station PDS Presents Baritone Soloist

The PDS program this morning presents a former Master of Ceremonies at Loew's Theater, a professional radio entertainer, and soloist of the Wesley Methodist Church. He is Robert Carbauh, of Deale, Md.; Miss Doris Little will assist him in singing one of the numbers, the Ave Maria. The program will be heard over Station WMAL.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each week-day morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Michael Carrozzo Dies; Indicted Union Chief

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Michael Carrozzo, 49, Chicago labor leader, now under indictment for an alleged anti-trust law violation, died today, after an operation for the removal of kidney stones.

Carrozzo, boss of the Chicago Common Laborers Union and numerous affiliates, recently posted bond to cover a Federal income tax lien of $341,068, representing the Government's claim for unpaid taxes, interest and penalties for 1937 and 1938.

Flier Thinks U. S. Could Live Amicably With Hitler Europe

Special From the New York Times

Several weeks have passed since I received the honor of your invitation to speak in Chicago. At that time it was essential to create strong and immediate opposition to the trend toward war which was taking place in this country.

The agitation for our entry into the war was increasing with alarming rapidity. Hysteria had mounted to the point where anti-parachute corps were being formed to defend American cities against air attacks from Europe. Greenland, with its Arctic climate, its mountainous terrain, and its ice-filled seas, was called an easy stepping stone for German bombing planes invading America.

A cartoon showed the Atlantic Ocean reduced to the width of the English Channel. American safety was said to depend upon the success of European armies. Foreign propaganda was in full swing, and it seemed in many ways that we were approaching the greatest crisis in the history of our country.

But events move swiftly in this modern world, and the true character of a nation lies beneath such surface foam. When the danger of foreign war was fully realized by our people the underlying tradition of American independence arose, and in recent weeks its voice has thundered through the weaker cries of war.

Warns of Propaganda

We have by no means escaped the foreign entanglements and favoritisms that Washington warned us against when he passed the guidance of our Nation's destiny to the hands of future generations. We have participated deeply in the intrigues of Europe and not always in an open democratic way.

There are still interests in this country and abroad who will do their utmost to draw us into the war. Against these interests we must be continuously on our guard. But American opinion is now definitely and overwhelmingly against our involvement.

Both political parties have declared against our entry into the war. People are beginning to realize that the problems of Europe cannot be solved by the interference of America. We have at last started to build and plan for the defense of our own continent. By these acts our eyes are turned once more in the direction of security and peace, for if our own military forces are strong no foreign nation can invade us, and if we do not interfere with their affairs none will desire to.

Since we have decided against entering the war in Europe, it is time for us to consider the relationship we will have with Europe after this war is over. It is only by using the utmost intelligence in establishing and maintaining this relationship that we can keep America out of war in the future.

I have a different outlook toward Europe than most people in America. In consequence I am advised to speak guardedly on the subject of war. I am told that one must not stand too strongly against the trend of the times, and that, to be effective, what one says must meet with general approval.

There is much to be said for this argument, yet, right or wrong, it is contrary to the values that I hold highest in life. I prefer to say what I believe or not speak at all. I would far rather have your respect for the sincerity of what I say than attempt to win your applause by confining my discussion to popular concepts. Therefore I speak to you today as I would speak to close friends rather than as one is supposed to address a large audience.

I do not offer my opinion as an expert, but rather as a citizen who is alarmed at the position our country has reached in this era of experts.

As laymen we are often told that the solution of difficult problems should be left to the specialist. But since specialists differ in the solutions they recommend they must at least allow us the privilege of choosing those we wish to follow, and in making this choice, it seems that we are back where we started and must form an opinion of our own.

I found conditions in Europe to be very different from our concept of them here in the United States. Any one who takes the trouble to read through back issues of our newspapers cannot fail to realize what a false impression we had of the belligerent nations.

We were told that Germany was ripe for revolution, that her rearmanent was a bluff, that she lacked officers, that she flew her airplanes from one field to another so they would be counted again and again by foreign observers.

We were informed that Russia had the most powerful air fleet in the world, that the French army was superior to any in Europe, that the British navy was more than a match for the German air force, that Germany lacked enough food, fuel and raw materials to wage war, that the Maginot line was impregnable, that Italy would never enter the war against England. Statements of this sort have issued forth in an endless stream from Europe, and any one who has questioned their accuracy was called a Nazi agent.

These examples show how greatly we have been misled about the military condition in Europe. If one goes still farther back, he will find that we have also been misled about poltical conditions. It has seemed obvious to me for many years that the situation in Europe would have to change, either by agreement or by war. I hoped that we had reached a degree of civilization where change might come by agreement. Living in Europe made me fear that it would come only through war.

There is a proverb in China which says that "when the rich become too rich and the poor too poor, something happens." This applies to nations as well as men.

When I saw the wealth of the British Empire I felt that the rich had become too rich. When I saw the poverty of central Europe I felt that the poor had become too poor. That something would happen was blazoned even on the skies of Europe by mounting thousands of fighting aircraft.

Complimenis Nazis

From 1936 to 1939, as I traveled through European countries, I saw the phenomenal military strength of Germany growing like a giant at the side of an aged and complacent England. France was awake to her danger, but too far occupied with personal ambitions, industrial troubles and internal politics to make more than a feeble effort to rearm. In England there was organization without spirit. In France there was spirit without organization. In Germany there were both.

I realized that I was witnessing a clash between the heirs of another war. A generation had passed since the Treaty of Versailles. The sons of victory and the sons of defeat were about to meet on the battlefield of their fathers.

As I traveled first among those who had won and then among those who had lost, the words of a French philosopher kept running through my mind, "Many thrive on adversity."

The underlying issue was clear. It was not the support of "democracy" or the so-called democratic nations would have given more assistance to the struggling republic of postwar Germany.

It was not a crusade for Christianity, or the Christian nations of the West would have carried their battle flags to the confiscated churches of Russia.

It was not the preservation of the small and helpless, or sanctions would have been followed by troops in Abyssinia and England would not have refused to cooperate with the United States in Manchuria.

The issue was one of the oldest and best known among men. It concerned the division of territory and wealth between nations. It has caused conflict in Europe since European history began.

The longer I lived in Europe the more I felt that no outside influence could solve the problems of European nations, or bring them lasting peace, they must work out their destiny, as we must work out ours. I am convinced that the better acquainted we in America become with the background of European conflicts the less we will desire to take part in them.

But here I would like to make this point clear: while I advocate the non-interference by America in the internal affairs of Europe, I believe it is of the utmost importance for us to cooperate with Europe in our relationships with the other peoples of the earth. It is only by cooperation that we can maintain the supremacy of our western civilization and the right of our commerce to proceed unmolested throughout the world. Neither they nor we are strong enough to police the opposition of the other.

In the past we have dealt with a Europe dominated by England and France. In the future we may have to deal with a Europe dominated by Germany. But whether England or Germany wins this war, western civilization will still depend upon two great centers, one in each hemisphere.

With all the aids of modern science, neither of these centers is in a position to attack the other successfully as long as the defenses of both are reasonably strong. A war between us could easily last for generations and bring all civilization tumbling down, as has happened more than once before. An agreement between us could maintain civilization and peace throughout the world as far into the future as we can see.

But we are often told that if Germany wins this war cooperation will be impossible, and treaties no more than scraps of paper. I reply that cooperation is never impossible when there is sufficient gain on both sides, and that treaties are seldom torn apart when they do not cover a weak nation.

I would be among the last to advocate depending upon treaties for our national safety. I believe that we should rearm fully for the defense of America, and that we should never make the type of treaty that would lay us open to invasion if it were broken. But if we refuse to consider treaties with the dominant nation of Europe, regardless of who that may be, we remove all possibility of peace.

Nothing is to be gained by shouting names and pointing the finger of blame across the ocean. Our grandstand advice to England and our criticism of her campaigns has been neither wanted nor helpful.

Our accusations of aggression and barbarism on the part of Germany simply bring back echoes of hypocrisy and Versailles. Our hasty condemnation of a French government, struggling desperately to save a defeated nation from collapse, can do nothing but add to famine, hatred and chaos.

Advocates Peace Plan

If we desire to keep America out of war, we must take the lead in offering a plan for peace. That plan should be based upon the welfare of America. It should be backed by an impregnable system of defense. It should incorporate terms of mutual advantage but it should not involve the internal affairs of Europe; they never were and never will be carried out to our desires.

Let us offer Europe a plan for the progress and protection of the western civilization of which they and we each form a part. But whatever their reply may be, let us carry on the American destiny of which our forefathers dreamed as they cut their farm lands from virgin forests. What would they think of the claim that our frontiers lie in Europe!

Let us guard the independence that the soldiers of our revolution won against overwhelming odds. what, I ask you, would those soldiers say if they could hear this nation, grown 130,000,000 strong, being told that only the British fleet protects us from invasion?

Our nation was born of courage and hardship. It grew on the fearless spirit of the pioneer. Now that it has become one of the greatest powers on earth, ours must not be the generation that kneels in fear of future hardships, or of invasions by a Europe already torn by war.

I do not believe we will ever accept a philosophy of calamity, weakness and fear. I have faith in an American Army, an American Navy, an American air force—and most important of all, the American character which, in normal times, lies quietly beneath the surface of this Nation.

French Reported Planning to Put Politicians in Uniforms

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Aug. 4.—One political party with at least some of its chieftains in uniform was forecast today as the basic pattern of the new France being built on the ruins of the Third Republic.

(Uniformed party leaders are one of the features of the German and Italian political systems.)

Dissolution of the old political parties will be among the first matters taken up with the forthcoming organization of a single national party, Marcel Deat, one of the leading participants in preliminary meetings, whote in the newspaper L'Ouevre.

In fact, he said, the death of the Nazi-mastered republic's multiple parties actually "was registered at the same time as the death of the parliamentary regime."

The new, unopposed party belongs to Chief of State Marshal Philippe Petain and its guiding motive is "the great French family," Deat wrote.

Unofficial accounts of preliminary meetings mentioned arguments by Deputy Gaston Bergery for alterations in the present Petain cabinet. Vice Premier Pierre Laval was said to have made no open objection.

Nevertheless, despite rumors that there might be governmental changes, nothing official has as yet been announced.

It was understood also that there is a tendency among organizers of the new national party to put at least the upper tiers of its hierarchy and its regional chieftains in uniform.

Unoccupied France, meanwhile, struggled steadily with the towering problem of reconstruction.

A dispatch to the newspaper Petit Parisien said 39 trains were returning 40,000 refugees a day to their homes in Belgium and the German-occupied areas of France. It said 900,000 Parisians had returned home between June 25 and August 4, raising the total who have returned to the capital and its environs to 2,900,00.

The new armed forces of France will be not only smaller but younger.

Under the demobilization clauses of the armistice terms France is required, among other things, to reduce the number of regular army, navy and airforce officers.

Marshal Petain accordingly issued today a decree setting new maximum age limits for all ranks; limits which tend to weed out the older officers and permit younger men to assume posts of authority.

500 Arrested in Looting

Lyon, France, Aug. 4 (AP).—French civil and military authorities have made more than 500 arrests in the Lyon region alone in a house-to-house search for arms, munitions and supplies looted from warehouses during France's last days of war. Several truckloads of hidden guns and ammunition have been found.

Trial Begins Thursday

Riom, France, Aug. 4.—Like a disused theater, this almost forgotten town of grass-grown streets and derelict mansions of another year began a frenzy of excited cleaning today, preparing for the history-making trials of former Premier Edouard Daladier and other leaders accused of plunging an ill-prepared nation into war and disaster.

Although the names of the defendants have not been announced, Daladier, Georges Mandel, former minister of colonies; Cesar Campinichi, former navy minister; Yvon Delbos, former minister of education and foreign affairs, and several members of the Chamber of Deputies have been charged with responsibility for the defeat.

Others mentioned in connection with the trial, which starts Thursday before a part-military, part-civil supreme court are former Premier Paul Reynaud and the former commander of the Allied forces in France, Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin.

The maximum penalty would be life imprisonment.

Scene of Trial

At the Palais de Justice, most notable building in the town, the flustered woman caretaker lamented as she learned that the building had been chosen as the seat of the spectacle that may be one of the most notable proceedings in French history, perhaps even ranking with the famous Dreyfus affair.

Her most important previous duty has been to guide casual tourists through the Palais, but she seized a duster and set to work, determined to make everything eidy for the judicial spectacle.

The Palais stands on the main street, atop a tree-bordered knoll in the center of the town which once was the capital of the Duchy of Auvergne.

Originally built as a chateau by the Duc de Berry in the fourteenth century, the Palais was reconstructed in 1830. The chapel is all that remains of the original building.

In the council hall, where the trials will be held, are long, black, leather-covered seats providing room for only about 200 persons.

Behind the bench, which resembles that of the United States Supreme Court in Washington, are seven red-leather chairs whence the judges can look down on an open space of polished hardwood upon the accused and their pleaders.

Behind the judges' seats is a niche containing a marble bust of Marianne, symbolic of the French Republic which now has been superseded by the French State.
